PICKETING, WHEN IMPORTUNITY IS INVOLVED, ILLEGAL

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision in Case Growing Out of Strike at Granite City Foundries.

SAYS EACH MUST BE HANDLED ON MERITS

Importunity—Act of importuning (which is to urge with frequent application, to harass with frequent demands).—Standard Dictionary.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Organized labor has no right to picket during a strike, when it involves importunity, the Supreme Court today declared. The decision was delivered in an appeal brought by the American Steel Foundries Co. growing out of a strike at its plant at Granite City, Ill.

The court, in its decision declared no broad rule could be laid down in the matter of picketing, however, but that each case must be considered on its merits to determine whether the picketing constituted restraint and intimidation.

Chief Justice Taft's Statement.

Chief Justice Taft, in declaring the opinion of the court said:

"If in their attempts at persuasion or communication, those of the labor side adopt methods which, however, lawful in their announced purpose, inevitably lead to intimidation and obstruction, then it is the court's duty to limit what the propagandists do as to time, manner, and place so as to prevent infractions of the law and violations of the rights of the employes and the employer for whom they wish to work.

"In going to and from work, men have a right to as free a passage without obstruction as the streets afford, consistent with the right of others to enjoy the same privilege. We are a social people and the accosting by one of another in an inoffensive way and an offer by the one to communicate and discuss information with a view to influencing the other's action is not regarded as aggression or a violation of that other's right.

"If, however, the offer is declined, as it may rightfully be, then importunity and dogging become unjustifiable annoyance and obstruction which is likely to savor of intimidation.

A Case of Intimidation.

"In the present case under the conditions which the evidence disclosed, all information tendered, all argument advanced and all persuasion used were intimidation—they could not be otherwise. It is idle to talk of peaceful communication in such a place and under such conditions.

"The whole campaign became effective because of its intimidation character, in spite of the admonition given by the leaders to their followers as to lawful methods to be pursued, however sincere.

"Our conclusion is that picketing thus instituted is unlawful and cannot be peaceable, and may be properly adjoined by the specific term of 'picketing' because its meaning is clearly understood in the scheme of the controversy by those who are parties to it.

"But while this is so, we must have every regard for the congressional intention manifested in the act and to the principle of existing law by which it is declared that ex-employes and others probably acting with them shall have an opportunity, so far as consistent with peace and law, to observe who are still working for the employer, to communicate with them and persuade them

'Babe' Ruth Suspended to May 20 and Loses $3362

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—"Babe" Ruth's share of the world's series profits in 1921 was declared forfeited and Ruth himself suspended until May 20, 1922, by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis in a decision today, fixing punishment for the New York Yankee ballplayer for participating in a post-season barnstorming tour.

Ruth may apply for reinstatement on May 20 or within 10 days after that date, Commissioner Landis said. The 1922 baseball season starts about the middle of April, so that Ruth will be prevented from participating in baseball for at least one month next season.

Bill Piercy, New York American pitcher, and Bob Meusel, the Yankee right fielder, were handed the same punishment by Commissioner Landis. They participated in the trip with Ruth. The trip started out from New York City, playing several dates in New York State, but the trip was called off after they had been warned that they were violating the rules of organized baseball.

Ruth's share in the 1921 world's series amounted to $3,362.26, which he will lose by the Landis decision today. Meusel's share was the same, while Piercy received $100 less than his two teammates.

In his decision, Judge Landis speaks of the rule forbidding participation in exhibition games during the year in which that world's championship was decided.

Refers to Specific Rule.

"The rule was known to all players," says the decision, "and particularly to these men, upon one of whom a fine was imposed in 1916 for a violation.

"This situation involves not merely rule violation, but rather a mutinous defiance intended by the players to present the question: which is the bigger—baseball, or any individual in baseball?

After the outlaw tour, Commissioner Landis sent a questionnaire to each of the participating players, inquiring into their reasons for making the trip. Ruth replied but neither of the others even returned the paper.

Ruth's replies have never been made public.

Ruth Says "Let It Go at That for the Present."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—"Well, just let it go at that for the present," Babe Ruth, champion home-run hitter of baseball said today, when informed of the decision in Chicago of Judge Landis, depriving him of his share of the world's series money and suspending him until May 20, 1922.

CHAUFFEUR IN 2 AUTO FATALITIES DOWNTOWN

Killed Woman at 7th and Washington Saturday, and Boy at 9th and Olive Year Ago.

The Coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Tillie Trentman, 58 years old, of 5243 Blow street, who was struck by an automobile truck driven by Louis Appelman, 31, at Seventh street and Washington avenue, Saturday noon, was continued today until tomorrow morning, to obtain needed witnesses.

Appelman, an employe of the Popular Price Express Co. also drove the truck which struck Ernest Jobsky, 12, at Ninth and Olive streets, Nov. 28, 1920, causing his death soon afterward. In that case, a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accident.

The accident to Mrs. Trentman occurred while she was walking across Washington avenue at the regular crossing for pedestrians. She died in the city hospital an hour later.

2 CONTRACTORS TAKE $250,000 IN COUNTY ROAD BONDS

Contracts for the construction of Lemay Ferry and Gravois roads with concrete were let today by the County Court at Clayton to two companies which purchased for cash $250,000 of the county road bonds at 95, failure to market which in the regular way has held up the work contemplated in the bond issue.

The Unit Construction Co. of St. Louis, which bid $243,981 for the Lemay Ferry project, took $130,000 of the bonds and was awarded that contract, which is for 7.3 miles of 18 to 20 foot concrete road southward from Telegraph road.

The Whitlow Construction Co. of Charles City, Ia., which bid $199,002 on 6.7 miles of 20-foot concrete pavement for the Gravois road, extending southwest from Weber road, was awarded that contract and took $120,000 of the bonds for cash at 95.

The difference between the amount of bonds taken in each case and the amount of the bids will be made up from Federal Government aid that is being given for State highways costing up to $40,000 a mile.

Work on the two roads will begin this week with the hauling of grading machinery and material.

12 PERSONS KILLED IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

Reading Passenger Trains Crash in Cut During Snowstorm, Then Catch Fire.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—A head-on collision of local passenger trains on the Newton branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway between Woodmont and Paper Mills stations, 16 miles from Philadelphia, today, resulted in the death of 12 persons and the injury of more than a score of others. A snowstorm virtually cut off wire communication with the scene of the wreck, which delayed the company in receiving details of the accident.

The collision occurred on a single track in a deep cut, the trains being a local from Philadelphia for Newton, Pa., and another from Newton for this city. The wreckage took fire.

The injured and known dead were mostly commuters, living along the Newton branch.

Shortly before noon, the company gave out a statement saying the cause of the accident seemed to be due to the train leaving Philadelphia "overrunning its orders."

According to passengers, few were killed in the first impact, but many casualties occurred when the wreckage caught fire and ate its way through the demolish cars where passengers were caught. Rescuers were almost helpless because of the flames.

At one time three of the wooden coaches were on fire and were almost completely burned. Because of the tangled wreckage, officers of the company said it would not be possible to learn how many persons lost their lives until the debris had been completely searched.

According to passengers, the engineer of the train bound for Newtown waited about 10 minutes at Huntingdon Valley for the southbound train and then moved on. Shrill blasts of locomotive whistles were the first intimation the passengers had of their peril. A few seconds later the crash came.

Forrest Bellman of Southampton, Pa., a passenger, describing the wreck, said the locomotives were piled together with the first coach of the southbound train lying on top of a tender, and the first coach of the northbound train almost in the same position. Fire started almost immediately and burned fiercely. Some of the uninjured in the first coach of the southbound train crawled through windows, he said.

MANY EMPLOYES OF PACKERS WALK OUT ON THE EAST SIDE

Managers of Plants, However, State That Workers Who Failed to Report Are Gradually Appearing.

UNION BUTCHERS ARE ASKED TO AID MOVE

Armour Plant Reports 75 Per Cent of Force Missing and Swift Estimates Are 65 Per Cent.

Most of the butchers, meat cutters and plant workmen of the three large packing plants at National City, north of East St. Louis, went on strike this morning by order of the Amalgamated Association of Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers in protest against a decrease in wages averaging 10 per cent.

Union representatives said 2400 of approximately 2500 men and women employed in the three plants obeyed the strike call, while managers of the plants said the number was not so large and that most of the employes who did not report for work were restrained by fear of the others.

The plants are operated under the open shop plan, about 40 per cent of the workers being members of the union. In recent shop conferences, it has been announced, the employes voted to accept reduced wages, but this action was repudiated by the union.

Figures for Two Plants.

At Armour's it was said about 75 per cent of the employes did not report for duty today, and at Swift's 65 per cent was given as the proportion. Special details of police are guarding each of the plants, and the union is picketing Eads Bridge and all approaches to National City.

Butchers in retail stores in St. Louis and nearby towns, who are members of the union, have been notified of the strike and ordered not to cut meat from the plants affected by the strike.

The only plant in St. Louis affected by the strike is the St. Louis Dressed Beef Co., 3948 Papin street, a Swift subsidiary. The unions say that about 100 of the 800 workmen obeyed the strike call, while officials of the company said only 2 per cent of the workmen were union and only four men failed to report for work today.

CHICAGO PACKERS PREPARE TO REFILL STRIKERS' PLACES

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Plans for immediate replacement of union packing house employes who obey the strike order today for which they voted, are being carried out at the 15 packing centers in the Middle West affected by the walkout. The strike was voted two weeks ago, after a wage reduction of approximately 10 per cent had been ordered.

Two hundred extra policemen were assigned to the Stockyards district here this morning, where a large percentage of the 40,000 packing-house employes had voted to go on strike, according to union leaders.

The first report officially given out by the packing plants after working hours this morning came from Morris & Co., which reported that the plant was killing 100 per cent. The Morris plant employs about 7500 men and all gangs were said to have reported for work.

Reports from South St., Paul Minn., indicated more than 2000 men there were responding to the strike call; 2000 at Kansas City, Kan.; 2000 at Fort Worth, Tex., and 600 each at Oklahoma City, Ok., and Denver.

The employment office of Swift & Co. reported that there were "two men for every job." The company said approximately 80 per cent of the regular force reported for work this morning.

E. A. Cudahy Jr. of the Cudahy Packing Co. said that reports from the company's plants were that about 50 per cent of their employes had reported for work.

POSTOFFICE CLERK ADMITS HE LOST $1110 AT DICE

SHORTAGE FOUND BY SUBSTITUTE WORKER

Accused Man Handled Average of $1000 Daily in C. O. D. Collections From Carriers.

Joseph McDowell, 43 years old, of 3012 Nebraska avenue, lately C. O. D. clerk in the registry division of the main postoffice, was held at Police Headquarters today on an embezzlement charge. Postoffice inspectors reported that his shortage was $1110.66, and that he admitted having taken the money, which he said he lost in a dice game in East St. Louis.

McDowell was absent from his work for three days last week, and it was in that time that a substitute discovered irregularities, which, on investigation by inspectors, showed the shortage.

McDowell's duty was to receive from carriers the money collected on C. O. D. mail and to turn it over to the money order department for money orders to be sent to the consignors of the mail matter. He handled an average of $1000 a day. His salary was $1400 a year. McDowell is single.

He said, according to the inspectors, that he lost his salary in the East St. Louis dice game Nov. 3 and that he then began taking funds in the endeavor to win back what he had lost, but that he lost these funds also. His method was to hold recent C. O. D. tickets, without accounting for them, and to replace them with others and pay them off in time to avert a complaint from the consignors. No complaint had been received thus far from any consignor.

MORSE BOARDS LINER EARLY FOR RETURN TO THIS COUNTRY

Financier, Whose Presence Is Desired by Attorney-General, on Ship Before Other Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE, Dec. 5.—Charles W. Morse, whose return to the United States on the steamship Paris was requested by Attorney-General Daugherty, boarded the liner for his journey back to New York at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Other passengers were not permitted to go aboard before 6 p. m.

Morse had requested that he be allowed to embark before noon, but the French line officials pointed out that the stewards and other attaches of the vessel would not report until 2 o'clock, and that he would be cold and uncomfortable and unable to get luncheon before that time.

Morse, whose return was requested in connection with investigation of his transactions with the Shipping Board, said he had been ill much of the night. A request that he be allowed to delay his departure until Jan. 5 to consult a specialist in regard to his health was refused by Attorney-General Daugherty.

NEW PROPOSALS REPORTED MADE TO SINN FEIN

Irish Delegates Consider Them and Will Report to Lloyd George for Possible Further Conference.

CABINET MEETS AFTER PREMIER SEES KING

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—New proposals on the Irish question were discussed at a conference today between Government representatives and Sinn Fein delegates, according to the Central News Agency. These proposals, it was said, were being considered late this afternoon by the Sinn Fein delegation, who promised to communicate with Prime Minister Lloyd George later tonight, when a further conference was expected.

Earlier in the day statements were made in responsible quarters that the negotiations had broken down.

The crisis in the negotiations held the inclusive attention of officials today. Premier Lloyd George obtained an audience with King George and explained the situation to him, after which the British peace representatives held a conference. This was followed by a meeting of the entire Cabinet.

Truce Remains in Effect.

The truce remains in effect, and no immediate resumption of hostilities is looked for.

The correspondence in connection with the negotiations will be made public by the Government, it was stated, and the Prime Minister is expected to make an explanatory statement.

On the Government's side, it was indicated the argument will be that the refusal of the Sinn Fein to accept allegiance to the King made an agreement impossible, since that condition was insisted upon by the British and was, in addition, an essential preliminary to obtaining any assent from Ulster.

The Sinn Fein, it is declared, refused even a conditional promise of allegiance contingent upon a settlement, the most it offered being to "recognize" the King as head of the commonwealth of free nations.

The closest examination of the Government's latest terms satisfied the Sinn Fein delegates and the Dail Eireann Cabinet, it is asserted, that they contained no advance on the terms of Prime Minister Lloyd George's original letter, which was formally rejected in July by Eamonn de Valera in his speech to the Dail.

Two months of negotiations with Downing street had not got the Irish any further, it was argued, and, according to well-informed quarters, some of the delegates were opposed even to the consideration of the new proposals by the Dail Cabinet last Saturday, these delegates being satisfied that acceptance by the negotiators would not be indorsed by the Sinn Fein in Ireland.

Decision Reached Quickly.

It did not take the Dail Cabinet long to decide the issue, it appears. After a short discussion, in which all the Cabinet members rejected the Government's proposals, De Valera turned to the delegates and said: "These are your instructions; they are the instructions of the people of Ireland."

The truce continues to exist until notice of its termination is formally given, and both the Government and the Sinn Fein say they have no intention of giving that notice. Nevertheless, both sides feel, it is declared, that the course of events will be certain to involve a renewal of hostilities.

RELIGIOUS FIRE DANCE GIVEN FOR PRINCE OF WALES

Natives of India Also Entertain Royal Visitor by Dancing on Swords, Spikes and Saws.

By the Associated Press.

BIKANER, India, Dec. 5.—A religious fire dance was held for the Prince of Wales as part of the program of entertainment given during his stay here.

Bare-legged natives danced through the embers of a great bonfire built in the quadrangle of the fort. As they danced they sang wildly, and snatched up portions of the fiery mass which they placed in their mouths. A shower of sparks followed their footsteps and the heat of the fire could be felt 10 yards away. Subsequently they pirouetted before the Prince, inviting inspection of their legs and feet which were apparently moist and cool.

Nautch girls danced, and a juggler danced on swords, spikes and saws for the edification of the royal visitor. The entertainment was completed with the singing of "God Save the King" in the Marwar tongue.

Increase of $13,000,000 Over Last Year Is Victory for River Interests of Valley.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—A total of $27,885,260 is the lump sum appropriation for waterways recommended in the President's budget submitted to Congress today. It represents an increase of nearly $13,000,000 over the sum appropriated last year and is double the amount which Budget Director Dawes is understood to have planned to recommend.

The allotment of the money is not specified in the estimate, but must be determined by the War Department unless Congress decides to specify where the funds shall go.

The estimate reads: "For the preservation and maintenance of existing rivers and harbor works and for the prosecution of such projects heretofore authorized as may be desirable in the interest of commerce and navigation, $27,635,260.

SUBSTITUTE FOR ALLIANCE OF BRITAIN AND JAPAN

Understood Draft Has Been Prepared With Special Reference to United States Constitutional System, Under Which Senate Has Treaty-Making Power.

SAID TO EXPLAIN NAVAL RATIO DELAY

Japanese Government Understood to Be Discussing Two Matters Together; Impression Entente Would Causing Yielding on Ratio.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The draft of a quadruple entente (an understanding between Governments), which would serve as a substitute for the Anglo-Japanese alliance, it was learned today from authoritative sources, is now under consideration by the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France.

This is said to explain the delay of the Japanese Government in announcing its decision concerning the question of the ratio of naval tonnage, because it appears that, as the problem of warship tonnage is connected with national policy, the two matters are being discussed together.

There is a growing impression that, if the entente could be worked out satisfactorily, Japan would not insist upon her request for a 70-per-cent ratio of capital ships as against the 60 per cent suggested in the American proposals.

The inclusion of France in the preliminary negotiations for the entente has added to the interest. It has not been disclosed whether the terms of the proposed agreement would be of a nature to satisfy France with reference to her situation in Europe, or whether the entente would merely be a regional accord affecting the Far East.

It is understood that the draft of the entente has been prepared with special reference to the United States constitutional system, under which the Senate has the treaty-making power.

Wireless in China.

The subcommittee on draft of the Far East committee of the Washington conference today disposed of the question of use of wireless installations in China by the Powers, by adopting the tentative plan presented last week by Elihu Root of the American delegation.

Under this plan, which will be reported back to the main committee at its next meeting, use of wireless would be restricted to diplomatic and governmental messages; those installations which were permitted by Chinese grants would be used only to the extent authorized by the grants and the Powers would co-operate with Chinese communications authorities through conferences to the end that wave lengths be not interfered with.

Foreign Troop Withdrawal.

The committee on draft which is also considering withdrawal of foreign troops under the same general head of that dealing with communications did not finish the discussion of this phase of its program and has not yet reached even a tentative agreement with regard to Japanese troops in Southern Manchuria. The draft committee will meet again tomorrow morning when the question of troops again will be taken up.

The recess in the formal sessions of the main conference until Wednesday is not being taken as a

PROPOSED NAVY REDUCTION ONLY A BEGINNING, BORAH DECLARES

"Father of Conference Idea," in Interview, Says Submarine Should Be Eliminated —"Outlaw War Weapons Untouched," Senator Pointed Out.

PRAISES HUGHES' FORWARD PROPOSAL

He Believes Entire Country Should Be Organized to Work for Disarmament as Man Power Is Mobilized for War.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Senator William E. Borah, who is generally credited with having forced the calling of the Washington arms conference, told the Post-Dispatch correspondent in an exclusive statement this afternoon that the naval reduction program of Secretary of State Hughes, if adopted, ought to be considered but as a beginning.

Borah called pointed attention to the fact that the conference has not yet dealt with the submarine and other "outlaw" weapons. He thought the ocean-going submarine ought to be prohibited altogether.

"There is manifestly a depression just now as to the probable achievements of the disarmament conference," said Borah. "You see it and read it and feel it. This is due in part to the natural decline of enthusiasm after so splendid a beginning and in greater part to the closed sessions. The old communique—inadequate and false—which acquired such nauseating notoriety at Versailles, is not calculated to inspire enthusiasm or maintain confidence.

"Submarine Should Be Barred."

"But I believe nevertheless much is going to be accomplished. The Hughes program as to naval disarmament seems almost certain of adoption. If so, the conference will be more than justified. If it is adopted, it will be because it was candidly and openly and boldly presented. Public opinion had an opportunity to exert itself and it has done so. If the program had been presented in secret, where haggling and fencing could have gone on as at present with reference to the Far Eastern question, the naval disarmament program would have failed. Hughes did a great thing and a conclusive thing when he presented it in the open.

"But splendid as will be the beginning if the Hughes program is adopted, I feel it ought to be considered as but the beginning. Personally, I would like to have seen the opportunity seized, when offered, to destroy, or prohibit the barbarous, inhuman, uncivilized, ocean going submarine. I cannot but observe that so far the conference has not dealt with one of the outlaw weapons of war—the submarine, poisonous gas and so forth. The weapons with which the next war will be fought, should it come, are untouched. It seems therefore that the friends of disarmament should not permit themselves to be pessimistic or discouraged, but give Hughes full credit and full support for a splendid beginning, set about to carry on the struggle and to organize public opinion for yet greater victories.

"Full Organization Needed."

"I believe in waging the contest for disarmament with the same zeal and persistency that you prepare and carry on war. If we should throw ourselves into the cause as we threw ourselves into the cause of war and mobilize the moral forces for peace as we mobilize manpower for war, there is no reason why we should not safely escape from the moral breakdown and the economic chaos toward which we are not rapidly traveling. No halfway remedies will save the world. The situation requires open, bold, drastic, searching and conclusive methods."

Borah, the "father of the conference idea," sits in the background, keenly watching developments. Though he is not in the confidence of the administration, few moves on the chessboard of international diplomacy escape him. If a treaty or treaties come into the Senate as a result of the conference, his influence for or against ratification will be potent.

CHITA DELEGATION REACHES WASHINGTON

Representatives of Far Eastern Republic Want Japanese Troops Removed From Siberia.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Russia appeared at the Washington conference last night in the arrival of a special deputation from the Far Eastern Republic of Chita to lay before the Powers here the plea of that Government for assistance in securing immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops from Siberia. Other purposes of the visit of the delegation, according to its members, are to open trade relations with foreign countries, and to obtain recognition for the Chita administration.

"There can be no development of the country or development of trade until the Japanese troops are withdrawn," the delegation declared in a statement, "as for obvious reasons the presence of these troops prevents the utilization of our natural resources. The very name of the republic signifies the importance of the Washington conference for its people. The delegation hopes to be able to present its case to the conference in order to defend the interests of the Far Eastern republic."

The delegation is headed by Alexander A. Yazikoff, adviser of the Far Eastern Government on economic matters; B. E. Skvirsky, former Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs; P. N. Karavaeff, economist and editor, and Gustav J. Farman. The deputation left Chita in mid-October and has been traveling steadily since, coming by Shanghai and Vancouver.

Chairman Yazikoff, in the formal statement of the party, said the United States Government had invited Japan to send troops to Siberia with American troops to aid the Czecho-Slovaks and that all the Powers had guaranteed there would be no interference with the sovereignty or integrity of Russia.

He said the time had come for the Powers to redeem this promise and to see to it that the Japanese troops left Siberia so that "the disunity of a part of Siberia which is artificially kept up by the Japanese troops" may be removed.

Yazikoff claimed that the real reason why the recent conference between China and Japanese representatives at Dairen was a failure was because Japan refused to entertain the Chita suggestion that evacuation of Siberia be made a condition of the proposed trade agreement. He explained that the Chita Government was a coalition government composed of bolsheviki and nonpartisans.

The Chita Government, he said, was elected by a constituent assembly in April of this year, which assembly had been convoked on the basis of universal suffrage with more than 80 per cent of the population voting. The delegation, he said, would aim to open trade relations with American business interests and to interest Americans in the development of the immense resources of Siberia.

A second unofficial delegation from Siberia, which particularly represents the Maritime Chambers of Commerce, including the eastern coast of Siberia, the Peninsula of Kamchatka and the Island of Sagchallen, the northern part of which was occupied some months by the Japanese army, arrived today.

"Regarding as primary the rights of employes to work for whom they will, and to go freely to and from their place of labor, and keeping in mind the right of the employer, incident to his property and business to free access of such employes, what can be done to reconcile the conflicting interests?

Each Case on Its Own Merits.

"Each case must turn on its own circumstances. It is a case for the flexible remedial powers of a court of equity which may try one mode of restraint, and if it fails or proves to be too drastic, may change it. We think that the strikers and their sympathizers should be limited to one representative for each point of ingress and egress in the plant or place of business and that all others be enjoined from congregating or loitering at the plant or in the neighboring streets by which access is had to the plant, that such representatives should have the right of observation, communiaction and persuasion, but with special admonition that their communications, arguments and appeals shall not be abusive, libelous or threatening, and that they shall not approach individuals together but singly. This is not laid down as a rigid rule, but one which should apply to this case under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence and which under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence and which may be varied in other cases. It becomes a question for the judgment of the chancellor who has heard the witnesses. The purpose should be to prevent the inevitables intimidation of the presence of groups of pickets, but to allow missionaries."

Strikers' Representative Says Case Originated in 1914.

Frank C. Smith, a lawyer in the Central National Bank Building, representing the strikers, said that the case originated in 1914, following a strike of 1800 employes of the American Steel Foundries Co., at Granite City. The workmen comprised 27 local unions affiliated with the Tri-City Central Trades Council, and they went on strike in November, 1913, when the company refused to submit to arbitration a question of wages. In April, 1914, when the company's plant reopened, the strikers established picket lines. The company obtained an injunction in the Federal Court at Springfield, Ill., against the officers of the Tri-City Trades Council and the officers of the 27 local unions involved on the ground that the defendants were engaged in unlawful conspiracy. The case was appealed to the United States Court of Appeals at Chicago, where it was argued twice and finally decided in favor of the union officials. The company then appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the case has been argued orally three times.

JAPAN AND GREECE IN TRADE ENTENTE

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Cockspur st., London, S. W.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Considerable interest and speculation have been aroused here by the newest development in Japanese international activities—a Greco-Japanese trade entente—the Post-Dispatch correspondent learns.

According to news from Athens, a Japanese industrial museum has been set up there in which are represented the products and imports of manufacturers and merchants in Japan.

It is also proposed to found a similar museum in Japan in which Greek products are to be exhibited. Moreover, a Japano-Hellenic association has been formed in Athens with the purpose of promoting friendly relations between the two countries. This association is making plans for 250 Greek industrialists, merchants, journalists and professors to visit Japan next April.

But the extraordinary statement is made that representatives of the Greek army and navy will accompany this peaceful party. This unusual addition to what is ostensibly a purely commercial activity has raised the question in the minds of many here whether there is not an important political side to this trade movement.

This is considered here the likeliest interpretation of the unusual plan of sending Greek military and naval representatives to Japan with a trade mission and there is even some speculation whether the trade section of the party may not be designed to act as camouflage for the service section.

Such activity at a time when it is believed the Anglo-Japanese treaty is at the point of death and with the Greek position in Asia Minor just becoming increasingly uncertain, has much significance, is the general opinion here.

U. S. EXPECTED TO STATE "LAST LINE" ON THE FAR EAST

Announcement of Position on Which Delegates Will Stand Firm Looked for in Washington.

By CHARLES MERZ,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The delegates of China and Japan meet today to discuss the Shantung railway problem. They will have the center of the stage, for the conference itself, due to Arthur Balfour's absence, stands adjourned till Wednesday.

Meantime there is something which many people in Washington are searching for. That is a Hindenburg line in the American State Department. No one doubts that for the American obligation there is a strongly fortified position on Far Eastern questions, not at the battle front, but some distance behind the first line trenches, where a last determined stand will be made should advanced positions have to be abandoned.

It was the American Government that proposed to discuss Far Eastern questions simultaneously with armament questions—and surely with a purpose. Then there is our long record in the East—a record of firm insistence upon certain basic principles and the fact that we have had a dozen experts at work on Far Eastern questions as they stand today.

No one doubts that we have a Hindenburg line, but where does it begin? The swift rush of events in the conference last week did not disclose it. Few observers here in Washington in close touch with our Far Eastern people expected to find America's Hindenburg line just where the Chinese delegation thought they would find it.

Chinese Disappointed.

The most optimistic coterie of the Chinese delegation looked forward to seeing America with them in their first line. They expected, for instance, to find America insisting upon immediate abolition of the foreigners' right of "extra territoriality." In this issue, as in others, they have been disappointed. The American delegates do not insist upon abolishing extra territoriality immediately. Instead, they agree to join the other Powers in an investigation of the actual conditions in China upon which this question hinges.

Our Hindenburg line did not, and does not, demand the granting to China of powers which we officially believe she is not yet ready to exercise. But there is another Chinese question which has lately come before the conference and which raised questions of far-reaching importance to Americans as well as to the Chinese themselves.

These questions do not rest upon China's present ability or inability to govern herself; they are questions primarily concerned with the tactics and purposes of foreign Governments. And one such question has been raised in Japan's insistence upon continuation of her political domination of the Port Arthur district and a similar British insistence upon political control in Kowloon. Such issues should not be confused. They do not raise questions of economic opportunities, but of political dominion. Access to raw materials is distinctly one thing and political domination is distinctly another.

"Japanese Rights in Manchuria."

Traditionally America is pledged against the latter. Our State Department has waged a determined struggle, for instance, against the theory, and, in fact, against Japanese dominion in Manchuria. In this struggle there is one particularly interesting incident.

In asserting Japan's intention to cling to political domination of the Port Arthur district, Tomasano Hanihara stated that assurance was given by the American Government at the time of the formation of the international consortium that "those vital interests of Japan in the region in question shall be safeguarded."

As a matter of literal fact, on that very occasion Secretary of State Robert H. Lansing, declared in a formal memorandum addressed to the Japanese embassy Oct. 28, 1919, that our Government had considered Japan's request for Japan's "special rights and interests" in Manchuria and that this Government, after an earnest study of the proposal thus made, "reluctantly finds itself unable to assent."

Lansing's Declaration.

Moreover, Lansing went on to declare that our Government "can only regard the reservation in the form proposed as an intermixture of exclusive political pretentions in a project which all the other interested Governments and groups have treated in a liberal and self-denying spirit and with the purpose of eliminating so far as possible such disturbing political motives."

Is that our Hindenburg line today? Or have we dropped back behind it? Do we still draw a line between assured economic opportunities on the one hand and political domination on the other—classifying the former as deserving our support, the latter as both an infringement upon Chinese sovereignty and a genuine threat against the open door?

Events of the coming week will indicate the answer.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—It is questionable whether there is a harder working man in the Government service today than

Hughes arrives at his office in the State Department building at from 9 to 9:15 o'clock. From the moment he says "good morning" to his secretary until late at night there is scarcely a break in the round of duties connected with the State Department and the arms conference.

This is the Hughes day:

Arriving at his office, he turns first to the morning newspapers to see how the news of the conference has been handled and what has been the editorial reaction. Then he goes over the mail which his secretary has selected for his attention from the great mass of letters daily pouring into the department.

At 9:45 o'clock he crosses the street to the White House to confer with President Harding on the business of the conference. From 15 to 30 minutes later he is back in his office consulting with the other members of the American delegation. This meeting lasts till about 11 o'clock, when, if there is a public session of the conference, he goes to the Memorial Continental hall, or, if a committee session behind closed doors, to the Pan-American Building. A State Department automobile whisks him from place to place.

At the close of the conference or committee session, which is likely to be about 1:30 o'clock, he returns to his office for a 15-minute period of reading cablegrams and urgent mail.

Business Even at Lunch.

At 1:45 o'clock he sits down to luncheon in the Metropolitan Club. Sometimes he is alone, sometimes he has a conference delegate as guest. He is back in his office never later than 2:30 o'clock. On some occasions he has returned within 20 minutes from the time he left the office. From 2:30 to 3 o'clock he receives callers and dictates letters. Three o'clock finds him either still at his desk or at another meeting in the Pan-American Building.

The schedule he has set for himself calls for a talk with the newspaper men, both American and foreign, at 3:30 o'clock. This engagement is canceled or postponed only when conference business stands in the way. He intends to give from 15 to 30 minutes to the newspaper men, who stand about him in a semi-circle 10 or 12 deep and shoot questions on a multiplicity of topics connected with the conference.

Beginning at 4 o'clock he has another session with callers. Only those with the most pressing and important business can hope for an audience during this period. Sometimes he confers with other conference delegates and sometimes he makes a second brief visit to the White House to inform the President of the progress of the negotiations.

Often, after his visitors are out of the way, Hughes locks himself in to work on conference reports or devise plans for meeting this or that contingency. He is in his office usually up to 6:30 or 7 o'clock. Recently he was there until 7:30 o'clock.

Reaching at last his home, "Gray-stone," near Rock Creek Park, he gets into his evening clothes for some one of the unending succession of dinners and receptions that go with an international gathering of diplomatists. As Secretary of State and chairman of the conference, Hughes must carry a heavy burden of social duties. Some time ago, in a chat with newspaper men, he jokingly remarked that he would vote "yes" on a proposition to limit entertainment.

Social Affairs Important, Too.

The social affairs incident to the conference form a conference in themselves. An exchange of views across a dinner table, or a chat in a corner of a reception hall, while conversation buzzes all about, may pave the way to a decision affecting the future of three continents.

Even when Hughes dines at home there is likely to be a delegate with him.

Alone finally, in his library, after the evening's dinner or reception, Hughes takes up a sheaf of newspaper clippings two inches thick which a part of his staff at the State Department has prepared for him during the day. The clippings are editorials relating to the conference from leading foreign newspapers and from the principal American papers in all districts of the country. Hughes calls the collection his "editorial summary of the world." Not until he has informed himself thoroughly of the state of public opinion, as reflected in the press, does he go to bed.

On the rare occasions when he has an evening to himself, Hughes is likely to call in a couple of his secretaries to clean up the work of the day. Sundays he utilizes frequently in the same way.

Beyond a little walking and a little—a very little—golf, Hughes is taking no physical exercise at present. But he is standing up under the strain remarkably well.

His step is springy and his manner buoyant as he walks into the big ante-room where he receives the newspaper men, smiles and says:

"Well, gentlemen, what can I do for you?"

Habits Are Temperate.

Friends who have known him for a long time attribute his physical reserve power to his abstemious habits—he does not drink, and smokes only rarely—and to the outdoor exercise which he takes normally. He plays golf, but derives his greatest enjoyment out of walking.

Hughes is showing now the same sort of endurance that amazed the correspondents who accompanied him on his ill-fated campaign trip in 1916. In one day in California he made 23 speeches and wound up with a big meeting at night, seemingly as fresh as ever. He could outwalk anybody in his party.

Friends of the family never tire of praising Mrs. Hughes. She is described as a real helpmeet. On the 1916 trip she was "Mother Hughes" to the whole party. Those who glanced into the box she occupied at the first plenary session of the arms conference, when Hughes made his startling proposals, saw that she was looking down at him intently, with a motherly smile on her face.

BREATHING SPELL FOR CONFERENCE

By CHARLES MICHELSON,

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—For the purposes of the arms conference it is a good thing that Japan is on the other side of the world. That it should take about a week to get a reply by cable from the Tokio Government gives everybody a most welcome alibi from pushing critical questions at a critical time.

Japan's conditional acceptance of the 5-5-3 naval program—conditional on Tokio's approval and actually conditional also on Japan's not being pressed too hard on her occupation of Port Arthur and Manchuria—really demanded a breathing space.

Viewing only the stiff declarations—Japan's insistence that she will yield none of the things she won by war (Port Arthur and the Russian rights in Manchuria, also the railroad from Kiauchau and the coal mines appertaining thereto), and England's explanation that, while she is willing to give up Weihai-Wei, if giving it up becomes fashionable, but cannot think of surrendering the country back of Hongkong—the prospect seems pretty gloomy.

Pause for Cooling Off.

Really, things are not in a bad way; if these countries had been willing to yield everything that China, and perhaps the United States, think they ought to yield, there would have been no conference necessary. A diplomatic flote or two would have been all that was required.

Nobody expected this conference to be a concession shower for China; what she gets back is going to come as a result of debate, with intermittent truces whenever the parley gets to a stiff grade. The present hiatus in proceedings is merely the first of the cooling-off pauses.

So Washington is inclined to be grateful for the existence of the Japanese Cabinet, the Japanese diplomatic advisory council and the Elder Statesmen, all of whom are to mull over the acceptance of the 5-5-3 program, with the proviso that it does not count if the rest of the conference takes a bad turn for the Japanese.

This sort of acceptance really binds them to nothing; it is a sort of emergency track to take the train past a bowlder on the right-of-way. It is really much easier than it would be for Japan to say outright: "We'll accept the naval ratio if you let us have what we want in China," for, if she said anything like that, the obvious would be that the Powers in conference had no right to give away Chinese things.

Admiral Baron Kato has said several times that he required no additional authority from Tokio to make decisions, but, in the general willingness to let matters simmer for a time, nobody has looked for any inconsistency in his motion for delay until he hears from home.

Our people think the respite from tension is a good thing; it gives the British an excuse for putting off anything vital for the possible coming of Lloyd George, and the Chinese believe that Father Time is working for them, so everybody is fairly content.

Reparations and the Senate.

Meanwhile the commentators are dealing with theoretical solutions of the world's unrest and discomfort. Mr. Wells' suggestion that no country is well enough fixed to take the initiative in a grand alliance to save Germany, and at the same time make sure that she will not again become a danger to France, and John Maynard Keynes' thought that the German reparation dilemma could be handled by the arms conference, are bracketed together as excellent ideas except for the United States Senate.

Both of these or kindred solutions have doubtless been talked over informally by Hughes and the delegates from England and France, but there is no likelihood of their coming before the conference. The Harding administration has promised the Senators that reparations will not be taken up at this conference. The reaction to the Association of Nations plan at the Capitol—abstract and vague as it was in its presentation—makes any binding alliance that includes this country as improbable as sunstroke on Christmas.

Consideration of the German reparations means consideration of the war debts owing the United States. A conference on the latter is contingent on the present session reaching a successful conclusion.

If the nations cannot agree on so simple a thing as limitation of navies, our people are inclined to believe no better success would attend an economic session. In other words, the administration feels that opposition to any compounding or cancellation of any part of the war loans is already strong enough to make it highly difficult to oblige the debtor nations. It feels that a demonstration of the inability of the Powers to cut down the navies and so reduce taxation would make any concession impossible. So, until we get somewhere on the disarmament business, nobody is going to talk either reparations or war loans.

Naval Cut, Then Economies.

After the naval cuts which are to come out of the present conference—and there is still the utmost confidence that they will come out of it—we will go into the economies. The country refused to serve as arbiter in fixing the amount of reparations Germany can pay, but our officials have very distinct views as to these and in such a conference would make a decided stand.

The war-debt business comes up in Congress today and there seems to be no doubt but that the commission headed by the Secretary of the Treasury, which was accepted by the administration after it became evident that Congress would not give Secretary Mellon alone the authority to refund these debts, will be authorized.

The commission is hedged about with conditions such as a prohibition of cancellation or substitution of one nation's obligations for another's, but it will at least put the administration in shape to deal with the debts in the economic conference; in fact some people believe this was the real purpose of the legislation sought by Mr. Harding.

American experts have not been idle while awaiting a final agreement on the 5-5-3 ratio for the capital ships in the British, American and Japanese fleets. On the contrary, they have made exhaustive studies with a view to being able to frame agreements on the less important features of the Hughes proposals the moment the capital ship ratio is definitely out of the way.

No stop work orders have yet been sent to shipyards which are building battleships and battle cruisers for the navy, and none will be sent until the ratio has been finally accepted by Japan. The reason for not stopping work on these big American fighting craft is found in the fact that many thousands of men will be thrown out of work when the contractors receive orders to close down.

Meanwhile the fact that work continues on the 15 American capital ships slated for the scrap heap furnishes a continuing object lesson to our guests and keeps before them the unmentioned alternative to our proposals.

Once an agreement is reached, however, the Navy Department will not hesitate to order all work on capital ships immediately stopped, thus reducing measurably the ultimate expense of the scrapping program.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—L'Oeuvre gives prominence to the announcement that "the Washington conference being virtually terminated, our collaborator, Pertinax, embarked at New York on Nov. 30 for France."

This announcement, however, is regarded as an intimation that the famous Echo de Paris writer has been recalled because of his dispatch which is generally blamed for the Franco-Italian trouble, which led to riots in Italy. This dispatch quoted Premier Briand as saying the Italian army was "in moral dissolution."

L'Oeuvre asserts legal action will be taken against Pertinax and reference is made in the corridors of the Chamber of Deputies to article 84 of the Criminal Code. This provides that anyone exposing France to a declaration of war by actions not approved by the Government may be banished.

M. Briand himself describes the affair as a "maneuver," and there is a widespread call for more details. One weekly urges an international scheme with the object of checking up on foreign news sent to agencies or newspapers. Heavy penalties would be imposed under this plan on anyone publishing false information judged likely to lead to international complications.

FIRST BUDGET CUTS ESTIMATES HALF BILLION

MOST DEPARTMENTAL FIGURES TRIMMED

Total of $3,505,745,727 for Fiscal Year of 1923 Includes $21,509,666 Post-office Department Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—A Federal budget for the fiscal year 1923 approximately $500,000,000 below the four billion dollar figure which had been estimated some time ago as the minimum of Government expenditious of several years to come faced Congress when it reconvened today.

The exact figures, as prepared by the newly created Budget Bureau and transmitted by President Harding in a special message, were $3,505,745,727, including an estimated deficit of $21,509,666 in the operations of the postal service.

This total represents a decrease of $462,167,639 from the $3,967,922,366 estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year and $2,032,285,962 from the actual expenditures in the fiscal year 1921. It is, however, $167,571,977 in excess of the estimated receipts of $3,338,182,750, while the outgo for the current fiscal year exceeds the estimated receipts of $3,943,453,663 by $24,468,703.

Apparent Deficit Referred to.

Referring to the apparent deficit for 1923, President Harding wrote the Congress that "ways are provided for the relatively easy adjustment without added taxation" of the discrepancy between the income and outgo. As one means he recommended legislation directing the reduction of the accumulated naval supply account by $100,000,000.

Actual appropriations asked of Congress for the various federal departments and agencies for 1923 total $3,224,875,592, exclusive of the Postoffice Department. This represents a reduction of $122,806,310 from the original estimate as presented to the Budget Bureau, it is stated, but is approximately $27,000,000 more than the appropriations for this fiscal year.

Explaining the $280,879,134 excess of estimated expenditures in 1923 over the appropriations asked for, Budget Bureau officials explain that some of the funds actually to be put out will be carried over in continuing appropriations and by other means. They say that appropriations for a given year do not accurately reflect actual expenses for that year, pointing out that while the appropriations for this fiscal year were $3,197,807,962, the estimated actual outgo will exceed this sum by approximately $770,000,000.

Army and Navy Estimates.

Of the total estimated expenditures for 1923 approximately $2,900,000,000 is to pay for past wars and to keep up the fighting arms of the Government, leaving only about $600,000,000 for the peace-time pursuits of the Federal establishment. The estimate for the army and navy is $801,636,107, a reduction of $66,305,299 as compared with this fiscal year, and $956,352,741 as compared with the fiscal year 1921.

The navy estimate of $431,754,000, it is explained, does not taken into account any possible reductions that might be brought about as a result of the arms conference, the total including funds for continuing work on the ships of the 1916 program, most of which would be scrapped under the proposal made to the conference by the American Government.

The largest single item in the budget is the fund for the interest on the public debt, the $975,000,000 provided lacking only $25,000,000 of the total expenses of the Federal establishment before the world war. In addition there is an estimate of $349,338,800 from the war debt sinking fund.

Included in the total for the army and navy is $31,964,400 for development and maintenance of the air services of the two departments, divided $16,195,000 for the navy and $14,964,400 for the army. These compare with expenditures this year of $15,000,000 and $19,159,700, respectively.

The navy estimates carry an item of $89,198,000 for continuing construction on the 1916 building program as compared with $142,452,000 for this year. Navy pay calls for $148,754,000, an increase of $49,000,000.

Details of Army Items.

Pay, mileage, etc., for the army is the largest item in the War Department budget, the figure being $154,448,400. For the National Guard an expenditure of $28,846,600 is estimated.

Expenditures on public works under the War Department are given as $57,943,900, including $44,245,400 for rivers and harbors, as compared with $29,850,000 for the current year.

Included in the $455,232,702 estimate for the Veterans' Bureau are these items: Military and naval compensation, $160,000,000; military and naval insurance, $62,713,000; vocational rehabilitation, $127,000,000; medical and hospital service, $72,000,000, and salaries and expenses, $26,521,702.

For prohibition enforcement, the Budget Bureau estimates $10,000,000, an increase of $2,500,000 over this year. Expenses of the Internal Revenue Bureau are placed at $66,206,190, as compared with $58,032,799 for this year.

Sums for Independent Agencies.

Estimates for independent agencies include: Federal trade commission, $948,500; Interstate Commerce Commission, $4,995,240; Housing Corporation, $1,267,453; Railroad Labor Board, $398,650; Alien Property Custodian, $390,480; Civil Service Commission, $595,595, and Employes' Compensation Commission and Compensation Fund, $2,798,000.

While the Railroad Administration and the transportation act are expected to cost the Government $337,679,235 in 1922, no estimate of expenditures for these purposes for 1923 was included in the budget. Experts explained that it was not possible to make an accurate estimate of what would be needed for the carriers until after the results of the 1922 railroad financing are known.

Accompanying the budget as sent to Congress is a detailed report from Director-General Dawes as to the operation of the budget bureau since its establishment five months ago and some pointed comments as to means of continuing its efficient operation. Discussing the reception of the budget by Congress, Gen. Dawes says:

"It is to be expected that since the preliminary estimates have been made under pressure by the executive for proper retrenchment, where consistent with efficiency, it will not be necessary, as heretofore, for Congress to make radical cuts upon the estimate as of the budget with any uncertainty as to what will be the result as it affects efficiency. The President of the United States, when he sends the budget to Congress is presumed to send it with all the reductions in expenditures which can be effected without due impairment of governmental business processes. In the preparation of the budget he has had at work an authorized agency in the bureau not only in ascertaining the reasonableness of desired appropriations, but in continually imposing pressure upon the departments for a reduction in the estimates wherever proper and possible."

Statement by Dawes.

Gen. Dawes says he feels that the estimate for expenditures for 1923, upon which the budget is based, "will not be increased except through appropriations initiated by Congress or by the executive as a result of emergency or unforeseen conditions arising after the preparation of the budget."

Reiterating his recommendation that Congress immediately repeal all outstanding continuous appropriations and "revolving funds," Gen. Dawes says the method of appropriating money heretofore followed "has resulted in a condition of things under which it is almost impossible for either the executive, Congress or the Secretary of the Treasury to have before them a true picture of the fiscal condition of the Government at any particular time."

"The whole habit of making continuous appropriations to which the Government has been committed in the past," he adds, "is only an encouragement to a lack of scrutiny of public work by the head of the department under which it is carried on, and an encouragement to shiftlessness and carelessness on the part of the subordinates more directly concerned in it. This system of preparing budget will confine the attention of the executive, of Congress and of the public to the one great important question, to wit, the relation of the money actually to be spent by the Government to the money actually to be received by the Government in any given year, all its outstanding obligations and indefinite commitments, projects and enterprises considered. This will enable Congress, with more intelligence, to determine at any time both the necessity for retrenchment and the ability of the Government to engage in additional projects to be initiated by Congress outside of the budgetary provisions."

Faults Pointed Out.

Likening the Federal Government to a business corporation, Gen. Dawes points to these "faults" which he says existed:

The president of the corporation (the President of the United States) gave practically no attention to its ordinary routine business.

The administrative vice president (members of the cabinet) were allowed to run their several departments as if each separate department was an independent authority in all matters of routine business.

"Because of a lack of any outlined business plan, no system existed for making purchases or in selling material along business lines under a unified policy.

"No balance sheet of the corporation as a whole was ever prepared.

"The treasurer kept no accurate account of the contingent obligations of the various Federal departments, thus resulting in money being drawn from him continuously in excess of the estimated annual running expenses.

"The corporation, in effect, seldom reconsidered an unwise project entered into by any department.

"The administrative heads of the departments were selected as a rule with little reference to their business qualifications and were compelled to rely largely upon the advice of subordinates 'wedded to the theory of the right of independent operation of the department.'"

Efforts to Rectify Faults.

Outlining the work of the various co-ordinating agencies established by presidential order "to rectify faults in the routine business of the Government," Gen. Dawes says:

"They involve no transfer of authority the location of which has been fixed otherwise by statute.

"They involve the delegation of no questions of policy save that of economy and efficiency.

"They are simply agents by which unified methods of ordinary business can be imposed by the chief executive.

"They are created simply to give the President of the United States the same agencies of contact and transmission of authority as obtain in any private organization.

"They involve no material addition to the expense of governmental administration.

"They are nonpartisan, being composed of men already in the Government service.

"They are in effect simply a regrouping under an executive leadership of certain of the present employes of Government of such experience, contact and relation in its routine business as enables them to make possible the application of common-sense business methods.

"It cannot be too often reiterated that this most important reformation in the governmental business system is dependent upon the President of the United States himself, and upon his continued assumption of his responsibility as its business head. The minute he relaxes his attitude of attention to this duty there will be felt the natural pull of the departments and establishments toward the old system of complete independence and decentralization."

Gen. Dawes concludes his report with this statement:

"In making this report the Director of the Budget will state that his connection with the bureau is limited as to time, in accordance with an understanding which he had with the President at the time of his appointment. His purpose in making this announcement at this time is to emphasize the fact that his recommendations are made in an impersonal way, with fundamental business principles and their proper preservation in their application to governmental business administration alone in mind."

PATROLMAN, WHO WORKED ON RULOFF CASE, SUSPENDED

Andrew J. Dolan Charged With Neglect of Duty in Permitting Witness to Use Telephone.

POLICE BOARD WILL HEAR CASE TOMORROW

Capt. Stinger Explains That Granting Permission to Call Lawyer for Man Held Was Coroner's Duty.

Patrolman Andrew J. Dolan of the Carr Street District was suspended by Capt. Stinger today on a charge of neglect of duty. The specific allegation on which his trial is set for tomorrow's Police Board meeting is that last Saturday, at the Coroner's office, he permitted Samuel Rutstein to use the telephone in an effort to call a lawyer.

Rutstein was under arrest and held as a Coroner's witness at the inquest over George Ruloff, who was found shot to death at the Allies' Restaurant, 1318½ Franklin avenue, last Friday.

In suspending Dolan, Capt. Stinger said giving permission to Rutstein to use a telephone was a violation of police duty by Dolan, as this permission should have been obtained from the Coroner.

Ruloff was a henchman of Constable William T. Egan, who was shot and killed by gangsters in front of his saloon at 1400 Franklin avenue, the night of Oct. 30. The killing of Ruloff is supposed by the police to have been an aftermath of the Egan killing.

Started to Hospital With Egan.

Dolan is the policeman who started to the city hospital with Egan and John Dougherty, Egan's chauffeur, after Egan was shot. On the way the automobile was stalled. Dolan took Egan the remainder of the way to the hospital in an ambulance and when he returned Egan's machine and Dougherty were gone. The $5600 machine, one of the assets of Egan's estate, has not been found.

Dolan has been a patrolman since 1906. He lives at 4621 Enright avenue and has a wife and eight children.

The inquest over the body of Ruloff, began last Saturday, was concluded today with an open homicide verdict that Ruloff was shot by persons unknown to the jury.

Says He Found Door Locked.

Samuel Rutstein, who refused to testify Saturday, made a statement today in which he said he tried the door of the restaurant a few minutes after noon Friday and found it locked. He denied he had told the police he saw anyone leave the restaurant.

Robert Harris, a negro, of 1321 Gay street, testified he heard five shots while cutting wood in the rear of the restaurant, but did not see anyone come out.

William (Whitey) Doering, 30 years old, of 4401 Lucky street, who was a close friend and business associate of Egan, was arrested in the corridor of the Municipal Courts Building after the Ruloff inquest today. Detectives had searched him and found a loaded revolver in his overcoat pocket. He is held pending application for a warrant charging carrying a concealed weapon. He told the detectives he carried the revolver for self protection.

Rutstein and Joseph Cavasino, proprietor of the Allies Restaurant, were released after the inquest.

200 VAN DRIVERS LOCKED OUT; FAIL TO AGREE ON WAGE CUT

About 200 van drivers of the Furniture and Van Drivers' Union were locked out by the employers when they appeared for work this morning because of the failure of the union to reach an agreement with the employers as to lower wages.

Lee Withrow, president of the association of owners, said the situation could not be called a strike, but merely a suspension of business until the union can decide to make a satisfactory proposition as to wages for a new contract. Thomas E. Coyne, secretary of the union and leader of the men, said he had advised the men to remain at work pending an agreement with the employers, but that the latter locked the men out today.

The men have been receiving 55 to 75 cents an hour. Their contract expired Oct. 28 and they rejected a suggestion of 25 per cent decrease in wages. The union then was requested to make a counter proposition as to lower wages, but Coyne said the workmen would not agree to this.

CHARGES FOLLOW JURY'S DISCHARGE IN ARBUCKLE CASE

Panel Deadlocked 10 to 2 for Acquittal — Allegations Made of Attempts to Influence Woman Juror.

COMEDIAN MUST NOW FACE LIQUOR CHARGE

Defendant to Answer Charge of Transporting Intoxicants—New Manslaughter Trial Set for Jan. 9.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 5.—Following the disagreement and discharge of the jury in the manslaughter case against Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, motion picture comedian, the charge has been made by Mrs. Helen M. Hubbard, one of the jurors who tried him on charges arising from the death of Virginia Rappe, that attempts had been made at her intimidation.

Mrs. Hubbard told Milton U'Ren, an Assistant District Attorney, and several other persons, that a man representing himself as Gus Oliva, a commission merchant with whom her husband had had business dealings, had telephoned the husband Saturday night with the intent of having her change her vote as a juror. She let it be known that she had stood consistently for Arbuckle's conviction. Hubbard said it had been intimated by the man that he might save himself trouble by sending his wife a note asking that she vote for Arbuckle's acquittal. U'Ren announced the whole matter would be laid before the grand jury tonight.

Liquor Charge Advanced.

A Federal charge against Arbuckle, based on an allegation of illegal transportation of liquor drunk at the party in the Hotel St. Francis at which it was charged Miss Rappe received fatal injury at Arbuckle's hands, is set for hearing today.

A charge of perjury against Mrs. Minnie Neighbors of Los Angeles, a witness called by the defense in Arbuckle's trial, also was set for hearing today.

Arbuckle made a public statement yesterday.

"The undisputed and uncontradicted testimony established that my only connection with the sad affair was one of a merciful service and the fact that ordinary human kindness should have brought upon me this tragedy has seemed a cruel wrong," he said. "I have sought to bring joy and gladness and merriment into the world and why this great misfortune should have fallen upon me is a mystery that only God can, and will, some day reveal."

After stating that he rested his cause "in divine justice and the confidence of the fairness of the American people," Arbuckle concluded with the declaration that "no act of mine ever has, and I promise that no act of mine ever shall, cause them to regret their faith in me."

Arbuckle's defense was that he was assisting Miss Rappe through a period of illness, caused, according to defense contentions, by an internal disorder, at the time he is alleged by the prosecution to have injured her. The prosecution held that the injury resulted from an attempt by Arbuckle to attack the actress.

In the investigation of the Hubbard incident, U'Ren announced that Hubbard said he had been approached Saturday night by telephone, asking that he send his wife a note urging that she change her vote from "guilty" to "not guilty."

Hubbard said he asked how such a note could be sent to a member of a jury, and declared Oliva replied:

"Just give the note to a member of the Sheriff's office."

Sunday morning, Hubbard's statement continued, he was notified that if he did not urge Mrs. Hubbard to vote for Arbuckle's acquittal Oliva would ruin him. Hubbard is an attorney.

Foreman Also Accused.

Other charges of attempted intimidation were made by Mrs. Hubbard against some of the men jurors and particularly against August Fritze, foreman of the jury.

Fritze, according to Mrs. Hubbard, used abusive language to her, as did other men jurors in their attempts to induce her to change her vote, which deadlocked the jury for many hours.

"The entire case in the jury room was the trial of the District Attorney's office, rather than the trial of Arbuckle," Mrs. Hubbard said last night.

Following sharp clashes between District Attorney Matthew Brady and some of the witnesses, Mrs. Hubbard asserted several jurors remarked in the jury room that they did not like the District Attorney's methods and would certainly not vote for Arbuckle's conviction.

"This is a cheap attempt at a backfire," said Milton Cohen, the only member of Arbuckle's counsel who could be reached last night. "Of course, we know nothing of any attempt to intimidate any witnesses. We have been surrounded since this trial began by charges of intimidation, witness tampering and the possession of a million-dollar slush fund and the prosecution has made good on none of them. It will not make good on this.

"Tomorrow I expect to be a day of thrills. I am not saying what we have up our sleeve, but we have a few things there and we are going to let some of them come down."

Fritze Issues Statement.

Fritze issued a signed statement last night, saying that one of the woman jurors who was in the minority refused to consider the evidence from the beginning and declared that "she would cast her ballot and would not change it until hell froze over."

There were two jurors who voted for conviction, according to Fritze. His statement follows:

"I make this statement as a duty to the public.

"There was a tacit understanding that the members of the jury would not make individual statements. I have learned since that a number of the jury have, however, done so, and I believe, as foreman, that it is well for those interested in the administration of justice that the citizens of San Francisco should have the facts.

"The 10 members of the jury who voted on the last ballot for acquittal, felt that they voted on the evidence—fully considering it all. One of the minority refused to consider the evidence from the beginning and said at the opening of the proceedings, that she would cast her ballot and would not change it until hell froze over. The other was fluctuating, sometimes casting a blank ballot, sometimes voting for the defense and sometimes voting for the prosecution.

"Considering all the evidence, it seemed to us that the prosecution's case was an insult to the intelligence of the jury. It asks us to substitute conjecture for facts, without showing what had been done, and asked us to guess what might have been done and to guess only one way.

"Human liberty and American rights should depend, not upon guesses of anybody, but upon evidence.

"AUGUST FRITZE."

The members of the jury looked haggard and worn yesterday noon when they filed into the courtroom and took their seats. Fritze informed the Court, "It is physically and morally impossible for us to reach a verdict."

At the request of the Court he announced the final ballot division of 10 to 2 for acquittal.

Superior Judge Harold Louderback, who tried the case, then told the jury he wanted to determine if further deliberation might result in a verdict. "It is not my desire to force any uncertain hardship on you," he said. "But this case has taken three weeks to try and has been conducted at great expense. If you can come to a verdict conscietniously, I desire you to do so."

He then asked each juror for an opinion on the matter of continued balloting, and each answered emphatically that it would be impossible to reach a verdict.

The members of the jury refused to make statements of any kind before leaving the building. After reporting to the Court they were escorted to a side street by Deputy Sheriffs and taken to their homes in automobiles.

Brady Makes Statement.

District Attorney Brady said that Arbuckle had been given a "fair and honest trial," and complimented the jurors who held out for conviction as having "courage and determination." He was not in court when the jury reported.

"I had hoped the jury would reach an agreement," he said. "I confidently expected a verdict of guilty upon the evidence presented. In my opinion the disagreement does not vindicate Roscoe Arbuckle. A vindication could come only after a quick, unanimous verdict. It was my duty to present the facts to a jury. This I have done, though opposed by wealth, power and influence.

"The Court has set Jan. 9 as the date for a retrial, an dI will be ready at that time to proceed."

FEDERAL VETERAN'S BUREAU HERE IS NOT TO BE MOVED

Congressman Hawes Telegraphs He Has Been Told That Step Is Not Advisable.

The Federal Veterans' Bureau, Washington, D. C., is not to move its district office from St. Louis, for the time being at least, President Vesper of the Chamber of Commerce was assured in a telegram from the bureau today, which promised that a hearing would be granted before a possible removal was ordered. Kansas City has made attempts to obtain the district office.

Vesper also received a telegram from Congressman Hawes, as follows:

"Col. C. R. Forbes says positively he has advised those interested in moving Veterans' Bureau office from St. Louis that it cannot be considered. The bureau has a five-year lease on its St. Louis office, and he says to move would be to disorganize an efficient bureau. From his statement it appears the only thing that may be done is to open branches, but he added that nothing would be done this winter."

Col. Forbes is director of the Bureau.

About 75 persons attended a meeting in Mayor Kiel's office this morning, called by the Mayor for the expression of opinions on the garage ordinance, passed by the Board of Aldermen, which is now before him for his signature.

The measure provides that, in the second residence district as constituted under the zoning law, garages to house more than four cars can be constructed only with the approval of 75 per cent of the property owners on the block, and the aproval of the owners of the property on the other side of the street, for 100 feet in either direction opposite the entrance of the proposed garage. In the commercial district, under the same measure, approval of 75 per cent of the property owners on the block is required, but those across the street have no veto privilege.

Mayor Withholds Decision.

Most of those at the hearing desire the Mayor to approve the restrictive measure. The Mayor, who a few days ago talked of vetoing it, said public opinion seemed to favor the measure, and that he would announce his decision in a few days.

Paul Bakewell Jr. spoke for the Lindell Boulevard Property Owners' Association, favoring the bill. He said the organization was formed to prevent the building of a garage at Lindell boulevard and Sarah street. He said commercial garages were noisy and detrimental to a neighborhood.

Alexander Cochran, speaking for the measure, spoke of commercial garages as "gasoline dormitories," and said one of them had been projected at Maryland and Euclid avenues. He said garages brought objectionable persons into neighborhoods.

Arguments of Opponents.

Chase Ulman, apartment house and hotel builder, spoke against the measure, saying garages were a necessity in apartment house neighborhoods. He said some apartment house dwellers now have a go an unreasonably long distance for garage space. He said that, if the measure should go into effect, it would be practically impossible to get the number of signatures required for construction of a garage.

Robert E. Lee and Harry Newman, representing the St. Louis Automobile Dealers and Manufacturers' Association, argued for the vetoing of the measure. Lee said there were 78,000 automobiles in St. Louis, and would soon be 100,000, and asked what was to be done with them. He said he represented the "flivver driver," who now has to pay as high as $15 or $20 a month, he said, for a place to house his modest car.

Newman said the erection of $2,000,000 worth of garages was being held back, awaiting action on this measure. Harland Bartholomew, engineer of the City Plan Commission, questioned this statement, and said anyone who wished to build a commercial garage under the present law could get a permit now, or at any time until 30 days after the signing of the measure by the Mayor.

Speaks for Home Owners.

W. W. O'Neil, representing the Ashland Improvement Association, said that 300 residents of the neighborhood of Newstead and Natural Bridge avenue held a meeting and declared in favor of the bill. He spoke of the matter from the standpoint of the small home owner, who has invested all or most of his capital in a house and lot.

Mrs. Hattie Moore, proprietor of a boarding house on Washington boulevard west of Spring avenue, complained of the odors of gasoline and the profanity which she said annoy those living near large garages. "You don't mean, do you," the Mayor asked, "that garage employes are the only ones who use profanity when they can't start their cars?"

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

CHILD, 6, STRUCK BY AUTO; CLIMAX OF FAMILY'S WOES

Eleanore Rieger Is Taken to Hospital While Police Take Collection for Parents.

Eleanore Rieger, 6 years old, daughter of Nicholas Rieger, 1631 Soulard street, crossing Soulard street between Tenth and Eleventh streets at 9 o'clock today, was struck by an automobile driven by Ernest Wander, 3408A Utah street. Wander took her to the city hospital. She suffered a fractured arm, scalp wound, cuts and bruises.

The child was unable to tell intelligibly where she lived. A policeman, sent to the neighborhood, found the parents. He found that the accident was a culminating misfortune for the family. The father, a carpenter, is out of work and has been sued for rent and threatened with eviction.

Besides Eleanore, there are six other children, from 2 to 12 years old, including 3-year-old twins. The older children have not sufficient clothing to go to school. The policeman found no food and no fuel in the house.

When Capt. Kirk received the report he verified it by a personal investigation and collected enough among policemen and neighbors to relieve the family's immediate wants. Kirk plans going to Soulard Market tomorrow and soliciting donations of provisions for the family.

Wealthy American Tells of Predicament When Invited to Appear Before Japanese Empress.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—John D. Rockefeller Jr., one of the world's richest men, today confessed he had had to appear before the Empress and Crown Prince of Japan in a borrowed frock coat that fitted him only "pretty well."

Rockefeller, who has just returned from a tour of the Orient, said he had been invited to an imperial garden party in Tokio, but found he could not gain admittance without a frock coat, a bit of impedimenta it had not seemed worth while to take along.

All the Rockefeller millions failed to produce the necessary garment. Finally Charles B. Warren, the American Ambassador, volunteered to lend him one.

THOMAS W. GARLAND — 409-11-13 BROADWAY

TWO SAFES ROBBED OF $1390 BY BURGLARS

Burglars obtained $1390.60 in two safe robberies Saturday night or early yesterday, besides taking small sums of money in both cases and some property in one.

A 600-pound iron safe was rolled about 40 feet from the front office to a rear room of the Fuetterer Battery Co., 3215 Locust street, the combination chiseled and $790.60 taken. The burglars took $20 from a desk, five storage batteries worth $109 and spark plugs worth $20.

Burglars entered a store of the Federal System of Bakeries at 425 North Broadway, evidently through a door transom, and worked the combination of a safe to open it. They took $600 and then closed and locked the safe, and took $10 from a cash register. The cashier said he had put the $600 in two bags and locked them in the safe Saturday evening. The general manager discovered the burglary yesterday afternoon. There were finger prints on the transom.

Saloon Keeper Reports Two Men With Blackened Faces Robbed Him.

Michael Jacovich, proprietor of a saloon at 2400 South Third street, reported to the police that two men, whose faces were blackened, and one of whom carried a revolver, held him up in the saloon at 1:40 this morning and took $150 from the cash register. He said $60 of the money was in his keeping for his lodge.

Two men with blue handkerchiefs over their faces called Charles Czarlinski to the front door of his home, 1911 North Newstead avenue, last evening, and, drawing revolvers, forced him into the hall, where they took $26.37 from his wallet. They counted and kept the bills, returned the 37 cents and left.

Three youths, one flourishing a revolver, entered the confectionery of Louis Maglieri, 5478 North Market street, last night, and demanded the "tin box with the money" of Samuel Maglieri, 13 years old, who was in charge. The boy handed over the box, which contained $14, as his father came from a back room with a revolver. The youths ran down the street, dropping the box when Maglieri fired five shots at them.

William Litza, proprietor of a cafe on the Creve Coeur Lake line, near Woodson road, St. Louis County, exchanged shots with a highwayman who attempted to hold him up on the Woodson road, about a half mile north of the Creve Coeur Lake line, at 11 o'clock last night, one of the robbers' bullets passing through Litza's hat. Litza was walking north. He had a revolver in his overcoat pocket and his hands were in his pockets. The robber shouted from across the road to him to put up his hands. Litza began firing and jumped into a ditch at the side of the road. The robber fired two shots and Litza fired five. The robber ran south along the road and escaped. Litza carried $100.

CHRISTMAS MAILING WEEK OPENS

Appeal to Be Read in All Schools of Country Today.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Appeals for early Christmas mailing have proven futile in the past, but the Postoffice Department hopes to accomplish much through its campaign in the schools, Postmaster-General Will H. Hayes said here last night in announcing "Christmas Package Mailing week," which begins today.

A letter addressed to the school children of the United States asking them to urge their parents to mail Christmas packages early will be read in all the schools of the country today, Hays said. He asserted that the appeal through the school children was expected to distribute the Christmas mail more evenly through the next three weeks.

Leaders of the conference were John P. O'Connell of Salem, Mass., Lawrence Labrie of Philadelphia and Russell Palmer of North Carolina. EMPLOYMENT DECREASE HERE IN NOVEMBER

Improvement of Business in St. Louis, However, Reported by Federal Bureau.

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Notwithstanding a decrease in employment of 1049, or 6.4 per cent, in November, a steady improvement in business conditions is reported in St. Louis for November by Director-General Francis I. Jones of the United States Employment Service. Kansas City had a decrease in employment of 362, or 4.4 per cent.

"An improvement in local business which first became apparent in September has continued steadily," the report says of St. Louis. "A number of the jobbing houses are reporting larger business than in any previous year for the particular weeks or months. The iron and steel industry, which was the hardest hit in this district, has made a measureable recovery. The improvement in the cotton situation in the South continues to exert a favorable influence on local business. Unemployment is on the decrease. Shoe business is running full and there is some new construction under way." Other cities for which reports are made follow:

Greater Kansas City—Manufacturing is making a steady and persistent gain from month to month. The iron and steel trades that were seriously affected earlier in the depression are slowly rehiring their help and are reporting increased business. The mail order houses are responding to the usual holiday buying plus some improvement due to the sudden cold weather. Building operations are going forward rapidly in the endeavor to close in all construction possible before any serious snowfall. The milling trades are slowing down slightly and while receipts of wheat have fallen off rapidly, corn shipments are coming in greater volume each day. Some unemployment exists, but it is confined almost entirely to the unskilled and migratory labor.

St. Joseph—A slight general improvement in local conditions has been accompanied by a return of a more optimistic spirit. Merchandising, both wholesale and retail, has shown an increase and with the exception of the packing industry, all manufacturing has either increased slightly or held to the October level.

Hannibal—There has been very little change in general conditions since Oct. 1. There is a slight increase in the amount of building, and retail business showed a 40 per cent improvement over September, but even at this figure is much less than last year. Unemployment, while it exists in limited measure, is not noticeable.

Springfield—A return to better business conditions has been made slowly but steadily. The garment and furniture industry and the iron works are showing a steady increase in business and new construction exceeds that of last year. Retail trade is reflecting the general improvement and unemployment, while existent, is not serious.

RED CROSS RECEIVES $22,000 GATHERED BY MAIL CARRIERS

The St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday afternoon, at its headquarters in the Kinloch Building, was the recipient of $22,000 collected in the recent Red Cross membership campaign by the mail carriers of St. Louis.

The sum was conveyed under guard of a platoon of marines, and the letter carriers' band of 40 pieces gave an impromptu concert. The money was officially received by Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, head of the St. Louis chapter, who awarded prizes of first-aid kits and certificates of first-aid training in the American Red Cross First-Aid Corps to the carriers in each station who obtained the largest number of subscribers.

The mail carriers in previous campaigns have obtained large numbers of subscribers to the Red Cross by permission of the local Postmaster and the Postmaster-General.

GOV. SMALL AND CURTIS OPEN FIGHT AGAINST TRIAL

OFFICE RENDERS HIM IMMUNE, HE HOLDS

Defense Alleges Grand Jury Was Illegally Selected and That "Special Return" Was Unconstitutional.

By the Associated Press.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Dec. 5.—Gov. Len Small and Vernon Curtis, Grant Park banker, today opened the fight against trial under the conspiracy, embezzlement and confidence game indictments returned at Springfield by the Sangamon County grand jury last July. Appearing in the court of Judge Claire C. Edwards, they asked that the indictments be quashed as illegal and insufficient.

A "special return," in which the Sangamon County grand jury explained the basis for its indictments was the center of their attack.

Charles C. Le Forgee of Decatur, A. F. Beaubien of Waukegan and Werner W. Schroeder of Springfield, attorneys for Gov. Small and Curtis, declared the so-called "special return" was in violation of the Constitution and the statutes of Illinois and rendered the indictments null and void. They presented affidavits by Robert L. Stubbs, city editor of the Illinois State Register, of Springfield, and Arthur G. Brown, a newspaper man on the Governor's staff, to show how the special return had been given out to the press and widely published throughout the country, all of which, they contended, was prejudicial to the defendant's interests.

Lieutenant-Governor Fred Sterling is not a party to the hearing here, he not having asked a change of venue from Sangamon County, where the indictments were returned last July. The decision on the legality of the indictments against Gov. Small and Curtis, however, undoubtedly will apply to Sterling's case also.

Imposing Array of Counsel.

With an imposing array of counsel ready to argue to the last legal ditch, indications are that the hearing may last a week. Among the defendants' allegation is the charge that the grand jury itself was not "lawfully selected and organized as required by the laws of the State of Illinois."

The Governor also reasserts the contention overruled by Judge Smith of Springfield, July 26, that his office as Governor renders him immune from arrest and prosecution for any act alleged to have been committed prior to his election as Governor. "Wherefore this defendant," reads the concluding sentence of his motion to quash the charges against him, "not waiving but expressly reserving any rights affecting the public interest and pertaining to his office as Governor of the State of Illinois prays judgment that the indictment and each count thereof may be quashed."

Allegations Set Up in Motions.

Among the allegations set up in the motions of both the Governor and Curtis, it is argued that

1. They are not charged with the violation of any law of the State of Illinois, or any offense under the laws of Illinois, or violating any duties imposed upon them by the State of Illinois.

2. The indictments fail to give any date when it is alleged the defendants unlawfully received any money or property, nor is the amount of any sums alleged to have been unlawfully received given.

3. The grand jury returned a special report purporting to explain the evidence on which it acted, which report "was in violation of the Constitution and statutes of the State of Illinois and rendered said indictment illegal and void."

4. The special report "was unlawful and * * * was circulated throughout the public press, * * * creating an unfair and unwarranted prejudice and bias" against the defendants.

5. The indictment fails to charge that money or property entrusted to Gov. Small when he was State Treasurer was the property of the State.

6. The indictment fails to allege the purpose for which the money was entrusted to the Treasurer.

7. There was no "true bill" returned as required by law.

8. The case is without constitutional authority.

9. That the "pretended fiduciary relation between the principal and Len Small, as the agent, servant, employe or officer of such principal" is not shown.

It also is set forth that the indictments are null and void because of "indefiniteness, vagueness and uncertainty" and because each count is double and attempts to charge Fred S. Sterling with one offense and Len Small and Vernon S. Curtis with an entirely distinct and separate offense."

With the motions the attorneys filed two affidavits relating to the circulation throughout the country of newspaper dispatches quoting the so-called "special return" in which the grand jury explained its action. One of the affidavits was made by the city editor of a Springfield newspaper and the other by Arthur G. Brown, a newspaper man attached to the Governor's staff.

CONGRESS AGAIN IN SESSION FOR A LONG TOUR OF DUTY

After Ten Days' Vacation Body Enters Upon Program Expected to Extend Over Several Months.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The sixty-seventh Congress convened at noon today for its first regular session.

Ten days only had elapsed since the adjournment of the extra session, and it generally was predicted that the session convening today would not end until well into next summer.

The inaugural sittings of both houses were confined to the usual routing, awaiting the communication of the President's address. This was planned for tomorrow at a joint session.

Sixty of the 96 Senators answered the roll call when Vice-President Coolidge sounded the opening gavel in the Senate. The number of spectators was unusually small.

The Senate was in session only nine minutes, taking a recess until 3 o'clock to enable committees to notify the President of the assembling of Congress.

Receipt of the annual budget was the principal business of the House. Its opening session was marked by the customary call of the roll by states, instead of alphabetically.

Tariff and Allied Debt Bills.

The tariff revision and the allied debt funding bills were the major features of legislation on the program of the new session. Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania gave notice at today's Senate session that he planned to call up the allied debt bill tomorrow. The Finance Committee, of which he is chairman, is to meet tomorrow to substitute for the Senate committee bill the measure presented last summer by the House providing for an allied debt settlement commission.

Leaders said they planned to bring out the tariff bill in about three weeks, or at least after the holiday season.

Nearly a dozen questions of legislative policy confront the members, while scores of lesser matters long pent up in the crowded calendar of business will be pressed for action by their sponsors.

New and added prominence is attached to the President's message from the fact that, probably for the first time in American history, the message to Congress will be delivered in the presence of members of an international conference. Many of the delegates to the conference on armaments are expected to attend.

Discussions of Conference.

Any action by the conference on naval or army reduction is regarded as certain to be reflected in appropriation bills for those services, and, leaders say, there probably will be frequent outbreaks of discussion on the floor concerning the arms conference and its doings.

It appeared highly probable that no consideration would be given the naval supply bill until some indication is had of probable results of the conference, while that dealing with army funds is slated for late study because it may also be affected.

Panama Canal tolls and funding of the allied debt are two other measures which appear to be linked up with the arms conference in so far as debate is concerned. Some leaders insisted the tolls bill would remain in committee until an agreement is reached by the conference.

The impending Congress is the first to deal with the Government expenditures in budget form. The House and its Appropriations Committee will take up the combined supply bill with the expectation, according to Chairman Madden of the Appropriations Committee, of having all of its items to the Senate by April 5, the earliest date, he said, this had ever been accomplished.

Expected to Deal With Tariff.

The President is expected to deal in his message with the pre-eminent question before Congress—the tariff—and also may discuss the requirements of the merchant marine and the funding of the allied debt.

With respect to the allied debt bill, the President's stand urging immediate and favorable action is already well known.

Inquiries into the railroad and agricultural problems have been progressing for several months, but neither can be expected, according to leaders, to take concrete legislative form for several months. The joint congressional commission of the agricultural inquiry does not expect to have its data together before another month, while the Senate committee considering railroad questions promises to continue equally as long as before it attempts to suggest changes in the transportation act.

Reorganization of Bureaus.

Reorganization of Governmental bureaus and functions, including the administration of Alaska, promised to be a subject at the forefront of congressional business. The House plans to deal among its first tasks with the measure reclassifying Federal employes. Representative Mondell, Republican leader, has set that bill tentatively for consideration next Friday.

The Senate, barring changes in its program, will turn first to the allied debt funding bill. Its finance committee, Chairman Penrose said, would meet either today or tomorrow and adopt the House proposal for a commission of five which would be empowered to arrange terms with the foreign nations concerning payment of interest and principal of the war loans.

BARRETT ASKED TO UNRAVEL ELECTION MACHINERY TANGLE

Commissioners, Confused as Result of Supreme Court's Knocking Out Redistricting of State.

The Board of Election Commissioners, in a letter to Attorney-General Barrett, asked him to come to St. Louis for a conference to unravel the tangle which has resulted in the election machinery in St. Louis as a result of the Supreme Court decision Saturday holding illegal the senatorial redistricting of the State by Gov. Hyde, Barrett and Secretary of State Becker. The board told the Attorney-General it did not know how to hold the election Jan. 31 for delegates to the constitutional convention.

Confusion arises from the fact that, following the adoption of an ordinance by the Board of Aldermen establishing new ward lines, the Election Commissioners divided the reconstructed wards into new precincts, giving no attention to the boundaries of the old precincts. The State offcers previously had redistricted the State into senatorial districts, except in St. Louis, where the district lines were established by the Circuit Judges, who followed the new precinct lines fixed by the commissioners. In this new districting St. Louis received two more senatorial districts.

Now that the new senatorial districting has been held to be illegal the senatorial districts in St. Louis will be the same as in the past, but the precincts of which they are comprised have been changed. The Election Commissioners told the Attorney-General they had been unable to determine what precinct lines they should follow, and desired his opinion.

POGROMS REPORTED IN UKRAINE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The American Jewish Relief Committee has issued a statement declaring that a new series of pogroms is in progress in the Western Ukraine in connection with the Petlura anti-bolshevik expedition.

The situation was described as "appalling" in cable dispatches received from James H. Rosenburg, European director of its joint distribution committee, the statement said.

MAN WRONGLY REPORTED AS DESERTER GETS DISCHARGE

Harry W. Hammer of 2708 South Eighteenth street has obtained a discharge from military service, signed by Col. Hunter Nelson of the Sixth Infantry, Jefferson Barracks.

This discharge serves as a correction of the War Department's action in listing Hammer as a "deserter," in a tabulation published in the Post-Dispatch Oct. 26. Hammer was enrolled by a local draft board, but says he was never notified to report for military service.

GEN. DIAZ'S VISIT HERE ENDS WITH BRILLIANT DINNER

Commander of Italian Armies Departs for Cincinnati After Stay of 30 Hours in St. Louis.

CALLS HIS RECEPTION MOST EXCEPTIONAL

General Decorates Six St. Louis Soldiers, Who Fought With Armies of Native Land, at Moolah Temple Meeting.

The 30-hour visit to St. Louis of Gen. Armada Diaz, Commander in Chief of the Italian armies, was concluded last night with a dinner of marked brilliance at Hotel Statler, the General and his party departing at 9:30 o'clock for Cincinnati.

The day had been a series of affectionate demonstrations by members of the Italian colony of St. Louis, and the banquet, bringing together both Italian and American men and women in a setting elaborately decorated, caused the General to refer to his reception in St. Louis as one of the most exceptional of his 8000-mile journey about the United States. "The snow which greeted me quickly melted in the warmth of friendly hearts," he said.

General's Sixtieth Birthday.

The day was the General's sixtieth birthday. It opened with a parade of the Italian societies at 10 a. m., from Hotel Statler to St. Charles Borromeo's Church at Twenty-ninth and Locust streets, where the General worshiped at low mass. He then went to the Cathedral, where high mas was said. In the afternoon he attended a mass meeting of the Italian colony in Moolah Temple, where he decorated with the Italian War Cross six St. Louis soldiers who fought with the armies of their native land.

His speeches to residents of Italian descent were counsel for them to avoid segregating themselves in colonies in the United States, but to give, as citizens of the United States, the loyalty and devotion that they had been taught to yield as subjects of the Italian crown. His speech at the evening banquet was discussion of the opportunity the future offers for allied service by the United States and Italy. "I say to America, let us be united, and the future is ours!" he exclaimed.

The celebration of the General's visit was conducted by a Citizens' Committee after his arrival on Saturday at 4 p. m., in accordance with wishes expressed in advance by him. His will, accustomed to command, broke, however, before the imperious will of St. Louis Italians on the opening event of the program which they had planned.

Attends Mass at Two Places.

The General, when the subject of his entertainment here first was taken up with him several weeks ago, expressed a desire to hear mass at the Cathedral. The Italians were determined that he should hear mass at their church, St. Charles Boromeo's. This was compromised by the General's attendance at both places of worship.

However, when the General let it be known that he desired to go from Hotel Statler to St. Borromeo's ahead of a procession waiting for him on Washington avenue, the St. Louis Italians said "no," and the General's car submissively followed the marchers to Twenty-ninth and Locust streets.

The parade was composed of the members of 24 Italian societies, each of which displayed the large American and Italian silk flags whose beauty became familiar to St. Louisans in the closing days of the war. At the head of the procession reached the church, the marchers formed a lane four blocks long, through which the General's car then was permitted to pass.

The Rev. Caesar Spigardi met the General at the church portal, blessing him with holy water. Father Spigardi said that in Italy only members of the royal family were received by priests at their church doors. The General was led to the chancel rail and seated in a chair draped with the Cross of the House of Savoy. The capacity of the church is 1200 persons. It had not sufficient seats to accommodate those who sought admission to the mass.

Every Cathedral Seat Taken.

Likewise every seat in the Cathedral was occupied when the General arrived there. He again was given a seat at the chancel rail. High mass was said by Father Spigardi. The only reference of Archbishop Glennon to the General's presence was an indirect one. Toward the end of an eloquent discourse on the futility of the world's seeking to right itself except through the guidance of Christ, the Archbishop said: "I do believe that they who led our armies to victory will gladly yield their swords to serve and will set their arms before the Prince of Peace, if to Him is given the privilege of reigning humanity."

The General tarried after mass to greet the Archbishop and to ask questions about the cathedral, the beauty and massiveness of which, he said, impressed him. He asked where the materials for the altar came from and was told that much of the stone had come from Italy. Two pillars for the altar were lost at sea on a ship sunk by a German submarine.

Upon learning this, Gen. Diaz said to the Archbishop that he had not believed that the Germans had struck a medal commemorating the sinking of the Lusitania until he had seen one of the medals with his own eyes.

The first opportunity for close contact with their hero came to the Italian people in the afternoon at Moolah Temple. The General passed from his car under an arch of palms in the hands of about 30 young women into the presence of several thousand men and women, whose "viva's" roared about him, yet subsided at the instant he raised his hand.

Given Check for $2500.

Joseph Lumaghi, chairman of the Italian committee for the reception of the General, arose from a seat behind him with a check for 50,000 lire (approximately $2500) in his hand, the contribution of St. Louis Italians for the relief of Italian war orphans. Lumaghi spoke one sentence, but did not finish a second. "We hope you will accept our offer of"—— He endeavored to summon control of his emotions, but failing, thrust the check into the General's hand and sat down.

The General himself seemed greatly touched and suggested that the check be sent directly to the Minister of War, that Italy might be officially aware of the sympathy of the Italians of St. Louis. He signed back the check to the committee.

"Do not forget how much we owe to America," he said to the assemblage. "Without Italy and America the World War would not have been won. Italy, like America, wants peace and there will be peace, because it is the will of the people. There is more noble work to be done. I admonish you, keep the story of the war before your sons that it may not have been fought in vain.

"You have your duty to perform. Be good citizens of the land which offers you wonderful opportunities. It is your sacred duty and I hope you understand it to the fullest extent. Remember, Italy and America were brothers in arms. There must be no division of mind or heart in your allegiance to your new country, but I pray that you do not permit your native language to die here. I find too many boys and girls who know no word of Italian. Speak no more of colonies. You are part of this great country and you should take your place among the citizens of it."

The ballroom of Hotel Statler was gorgeous for the evening banquet. Great American and Italian flags hung between other draped flags on four sides of the room. A large picture of Gen. Diaz was placed directly above his seat. It was outlined in red and green electric lights and surrounded by countless small American flags on a large background of green smilax. Opposite the General, on a wall, was a large canvas with a figure recognizable as that of the General astride a horse. Eight young women in white with the head dress of the Red Cross except that the cap band was the Italian national colors were in attendance and carried to the General an Italian flag in flowers. Music, vocal and instrumental, was of the Italian classics sprinkled with American jazz.

The speakers in English at the banquet were Mayor Kiel, Robert Burkham and Jerome F. Duggan of the American Legion. Col. John H. Parker, commandant of Jefferson Barracks, was to have been among the English speakers, but he caused the General to start with surprise when he read a speech in Italian. The speakers in Italian were Nicolo d'Amico and Roberto de Violini, Italian consul in St. Louis.

The General, the last speaker, spoke in Italian, which was translated by sentences by Capt. Carlo Huntington of the Italian Embassy in Washington.

Referring to a statement of Italy's war record by Burkham, the General said: "I wish to thank those who have spoken because they have used expressions dear to my heart as an Italian. There is nothing dearer to the heart of an Italian than to hear from American lips a just appreciation of what my country has done at great sacrifice. Italy does not boast of what she has done—her duty—but we are grateful to those who can see and approve. It makes us better brethren for the future that is opening to us."

The General expressed his belief in future peace, much as he did at a dinner given to him Saturday night and reported in yesterday's Post-Dispatch.

Referring to his reception in St. Louis, the General said:

"Here in St. Louis, my reception has been really exceptional. I arrived in the snow and saw it melt with the warmth of friendly hearts. I saw the sun shine on the following morning, permitting large numbers of your people to express their hospitality. Tonight we still are going toward a crescendo."

Members of the General's staff marveled at the forced maches of an Italian band which, no matter where the General appeared, always was on hand to greet him with the national anthem of Italy, the "Hymn to Garibaldi." It met him upon his arrival, it was at his hotel, it was on hand when he left the hotel next morning to go to church and it was at the church when he got there. It was at Moolah Temple and again at the hotel when he returned. It heralded his arrival and departure at the banquet hall and when he alighted at Union Station it was there again. The band dashed about in an automobile truck which skidded about town on icy pavements at great speed. As the train began to move, once more the stirring bugle notes of the Italian hymn arose, but the last strain that reached the General's ears were those of the little band playing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

MAN WALKING ON ROAD KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

John P. Ward of 530 North Twenty-fifth street, East St. Louis, died at St. Mary's Hospital at 1:15 a. m. today from injuries suffered when struck at 11:45 o'clock last night by the automobile of O. E. Mount of Signal Hil, at Seventy-fifth and State streets, Edgemont.

It appeared from information given to the Coroner that Ward was aimlessly walking in the road, and Dr. Edward H. Lane, who did not see the accident, and who was ahead of Mount, said he narrowly averted hitting Ward.

Thirteen Persons Injured in Four Auto Accidents Yesterday.

Thirteen persons were injured in four automobile accidents yesterday.

An automobile driven by Albert Ulrich, 20 years old, of 33 East Broadway, East St. Louis, was struck and overturned at 4 p. m. by an automobile occupied by two men, at Seventh and Pestalozzi streets. Ulrich's car was southbound on Seventh street and the other car was going east on Pestalozzi street. Ulrich, his father, Dominick Ulrich, 64, and Miss Ruth Vatter, 22, of 3128 Market street, East St. Louis, were thrown out and cut and bruised.

The men in the other automobile, who escaped injury, drove away. When a policeman arrived a few minutes later Ulrich called his attention to a bottle of whisky behind a telephone pole and said it had been placed there by the men in the other car. He also said the men had abused him, claiming that he was responsible for the collision.

Automobiles driven by Bliss Gardner, 22, of 8400 Alabama avenue, and James Spitzburg, 4254 Manchester avenue, collided at King's highway and Easton avenue at 3:45 p. m. Gardner's automobile was overturned and he suffered a fractured collar bone. His wife, Mrs. Minnie Gardner; Miss Dorothy McClintock of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, and Earl Elmoore of St. Charles, occupants of Gardner's car, and Mrs. Louis Spitzburg of 4944 Maple avenue, Spitzburg's mother, were cut and bruised.

Three girls and a man were injured at 6 p. m. when an automobile driven by Frank Rosenthal, 28, of 5848 North Market street, eastbound on the south side of St. Louis avenue, was hit by a Cass avenue street car which was rounding the western loop of the line at Belt avenue. Misses Mildred and Olive Koehr of 4129 Hull place, Miss Alice Rosenthal of 4141 Hull place and Rosenthal were cut and bruised.

Mrs. Ella Wido, 32, of 3830 Vest avenue, was cut on the face and head when an automobile driven by her husband, Jesse Wido, collided with an automobile driven by Edward A. Jeanson, 5463 Delmar boulevard, at Grand avenue and Hebert street at 2 a. m., yesterday.

Dr. L. H. Slocumb of Ferguson, who has an office in St. Louis, was seriously injured at 6 p. m. Saturday when an automobile in which he was riding went into a ditch and turned over on the Big Bend road near Kirkwood. Dr. Slocumb was the only one injured, suffering fractures of the left leg and left shoulder. He was taken to Barnes Hospital.

YOUTH SHOT AND KILLED BY MARINE MAIL GUARD

By the Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 5.—Wiley Clarke, 20 years old, son of a farmer living near Blanchard, La., was shot through the abdomen yesterday by a marine detailed to guard the mails on Kansas City train No. 1, when it stopped at the station, about 11:40 o'clock.

Clarke was hurried to a hospital in Shreveport, where he died three hours later from the effects of his wound.

Clarke, it is said, had gone to the station to see the train come in and was standing near the mail car when the marine appeared in the door and ordered him back. The boy, who was ignorant of the strict regulations governing the actions of the guard, was slow to obey the order, it is said, and the marine shot him through the abdomen.

District Attorney L. C. Blanchard, who yesterday afternoon issued a warrant charging murder against Willis for the death of Clarke, announced today that if the Government wished to handle the case it would be satisfactory to his department. If the Government does not take charge of the case, however, the State authorities here will handle it, the District Attorney stated.

BUILDING IN FIRST 10 MONTHS OF YEAR NEARLY EQUAL TO 1920

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—New construction throughout the country in the first 10 months this year nearly equals construction for the whole of last year, according to a survey by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, just made public. The chamber's conclusions are based on figures from 44 important cities, reporting $603,000,000 in new construction in the 10 months. For the year 1920 the total reported by the same cities was only a few million dollars more.

The chamber in a statement declared that were all of the totals from the cities for this year brought down to date, the aggregate undoubtedly would be larger, because of the practice of many municipalities of making semiannual or quarterly, rather than monthly reports.

The estimated cost of all construction in the 44 cities in the 10 months was placed by the chamber at $722,000,000, divided as follows: Residential, $349,000,000; nonresidential, $254,000,000, and alterations and special construction, $119,000,000.

BUREAU OPEN TO AID VETERANS IN REINSTATING WAR INSURANCE

Men in Good Health May Retrieve Lapsed Policies by Paying Two Months' Premiums.

The Veterans' Bureau today opened its quarters on the eighth floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building, Broadway and Locust, to reinstate the war risk insurance of former service men who have allowed it to lapse.

The only provisions to reinstating policies are that the man shall be in good health and shall pay two months' premiums. In the case of a man in ill health from wounds or disease resulting from army service, the policies will be reinstated upon payment of all premiums in arrears.

The bureau has a full personnel of medical officers, and all examinations will be free of charge. It is announced that no reinstatements of lapsed war risk policies can be made after the last day of this month, and the bureau will endeavor to induce all holders of lapsed policies to take advantage of the opportunity to reinstate while the privilege exists.

SIX DROWNED IN CLOSED AUTO

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Roskuski and their 5-year-old daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard K. Laver and their daughter, 4, were drowned yesterday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding slipped off the river road into eight feet of water in the Miami-Erie Canal at Waterville, 12 miles from Toledo.

The two families had been riding in Laver's machine. They were on their way home when the accident happened. The accident was discovered by Will Isham, a farmer, who was taking his horses to the canal for water. Isham obtained help and hauled the car from the water. The bodies were inside. Apparently it had been impossible to open either door of the closed car.

Dwellers Forced From Flat by Fire.

A number of dwellers in the Cumberland Apartments, 4267 Olive street, were forced to take refuge in neighboring homes at 9:10 o'clock last night, when papers in a washroom on the fourth floor of the building caught fire. Police reported the damage to the building at $2000. The apartments were damaged by water.

PEPTO-MANGAN MAKES BLOOD GOOD

Physicians Rely Upon It. Sold in Liquid or Tablet Form

Gude's Pepto-Mangan is a blood builder. It restores blood to its natural vigor. Weak blood, clogged with poisons, causes that exhausted, dead tired feeling. It shows in the complexion, which becomes dull-hued, pale or sallow. That is because there is an absence of the red corpuscles which give skin a healthy, rosy color.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan taken regularly every day soon makes new blood rich and red. Physicians have prescribed it for years in cases of anemia, or poor blood condition. The weak blood is fortified by a fresh supply of red corpuscles. The feeling of physical vigor returns in a remarkable manner. Instead of a droopy, down-at-the-heel feeling, there is live, wide-awake energy. Sleep is more restful and the appetite sharper.

Any druggist has Gude's Pepto-Mangan in both liquid and tablet form. Look for the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," on the package.

MECHANIC ARRESTED SUSPECTED OF BIGAMY

Woman Says Henry Mertz Married Her in Kansas City, Telling Her He Was Divorced.

Henry Mertz, 27 years old, an automobile mechanic, was arrested at 5 a. m. today in his home at 1314 Benton street, where his wife, Mrs. Helen Mertz, and one child live. The arrest was caused by Grace Richardson, 33, of 1234 Graham avenue, who said that Mertz took her to Kansas City last month and went through a marriage ceremony with her, giving his name as Merch.

"Suspected of bigamy" was the entry made in Mertz's case at the North Market Police Station.

The complainant related that Mertz, whom she met a month ago, represented to her that he was divorced. She said they went to Kansas City and were married there Nov. 17 by Justice of the Peace Welch. She said they returned to St. Louis Nov. 26, and that they lived at the Graham avenue house until last Saturday, when Mertz disappeared. She found that he was at the Benton street home and asked for his arrest.

Mertz admitted to the police that he took Miss Richardson to Kansas City, but he denied having gone through a marriage ceremony with her. She said she would furnish proof of her charge to the Prosecuting Attorney's office.

REPUBLICANS HIT HARD BY DECISION ON GERRYMANDER

PARTY'S SUCCESS AT POLLS ENDANGERED

Results of Sweeping Politica Victory May Be Over thrown at the Nex Election.

By a Staff Correspondent of th Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 5.—Re publicans who hold jobs in the Stat Capitol now, see in the consequenc of the Supreme Court decision Sa urday overturning the Hyde-Becke Barrett senatorial redistricting, on of the most disastrous of the politi cal reverses which have overtake the administration of Gov. Hyde.

Having swept into power Jan last in the wake of the landslide o November, 1920, in which all of th Republican nominees for State of fice received majorities among th most impressive ever returned i Missouri, and with absolute contro of both houses of the Legislature Republican partisans felt sure o their ability to establish a dynast in Missouri which in the length o its rule would rival that of the Dem ocrats they were supplanting.

Straightway, leaders began to pla the reallocation of State Senator Circuit Judges and Congressmen.

Although casting within a few thousand of half the vote of th State, the Republicans had struggle along for years, able to elect only few Senators, Circuit Judges an Congressmen because Democrati partisans with an eye to the mai chance had so laid out the district in which these officials are elected as to minimize the effect of Republican votes. In 1919, with probably the best showing they ever had mad up to that time, the Republicans ha only five of 16 Congressmen, 25 o 60 Circuit Judges and 12 of 34 Sta Senators.

"Gerrymanders" Were Denounced.

During all this period of Democratic supremacy Republican candidates and newspapers as of one voic had decried the "corrupt gerrymanders" by which Democrats had mad their party absolute in the matter o patronage.

In each campaign they promise "fair redistricting" if given the op portunity.

With the convening of the regular session of the Legislature last Janu ary an even half-doen senatorial re districting bills were introduced, fi of them by Republicans, and all giv ing Republicans a substantial ma jority of the proposed districts, a well as five judicial redistricting measures, designed to take fro Democrats and give to Republicans Hopeful of circumventing a referendum attack on their senatorial re districting, the Republicans allowed those bills to die, but passed a ju dicial redistricting measure after a fight. This measure was promptly referred by the Democratic State Committee.

Gov. Hyde, Secretary of State Becker and Attorney-General Barrett, aided by the unofficial politi sagacity of Lieutenant-Governor Ira m Lloyd, all Republicans, then pro ceeded to lay out new senatorial dis tricts, taking 20 of the 34 in demon strating their view of a "fair redis tricting." It was attacked in the courts and, as has been told, was overthrown by the Supreme Court Saturday on the ground that adop tion of the initiative and referendum amendment to the State Constitution had taken from the executive office their former power to redistrict as to Senators.

Judicial Measure Re-enacted.

At the first extra session of the Legislature, Republicans, having discovered errors in their judicial districting bill which had been referred, proceeded to re-enact it, cor recting the defects and making a few other changes. Democrats already have taken steps to attack this sec ond bill in court on the ground that it was an effort to circumvent the right of voters of the State to pass on a measure which had been re ferred. This was done by offering to the Secretary of State for filing the declaration of Judge Vernon D. Drain of Shelbyville, as a candidate to succeed himself in the old Sixth Judicial Circuit, which has been changed. The declaration was not received by the Secretary of State, and his action is expected to be the basis of a mandamus suit in the Supreme Court.

No congressional redistricting was attempted at the regular or first extra session of the Legislature, because Missouri Republican members of Congress hoped to get around a referendum attack by getting a new law on the reapportionment bill in Congress to authorize the executive officers to redistrict. They failed in that, however, and at the second

PARTY'S SUCCESS AT POLLS ENDANGERED

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 5.—Republicans who hold jobs in the State Capitol now, see in the consequence of the Supreme Court decision Saturday overturning the Hyde-Becker-Barrett senatorial redistricting, one of the most disastrous of the political reverses which have overtaken the administration of Gov. Hyde.

Having swept into power Jan. 1 last in the wake of the landslide of November, 1920, in which all of the Republican nominees for State office received majorities among the most impressive ever returned in Missouri, and with absolute control of both houses of the Legislature, Republican partisans felt sure of their ability to establish a dynasty in Missouri which in the length of its rule would rival that of the Democrats they were supplanting.

Straightway, leaders began to plan the reallocation of State Senators, Circuit Judges and Congressmen.

Although casting within a few thousand of half the vote of the State, the Republicans had struggled along for years, able to elect only a few Senators, Circuit Judges and Congressmen because Democratic partisans with an eye to the main chance had so laid out the districts in which these officials are elected, as to minimize the effect of Republican votes. In 1919, with probably the best showing they ever had made up to that time, the Republicans had only five of 16 Congressmen, 25 of 60 Circuit Judges and 12 of 34 State Senators.

"Gerrymanders" Were Denounced.

During all this period of Democratic supremacy Republican candidates and newspapers as of one voice had decried the "corrupt gerrymanders" by which Democrats had made their party absolute in the matter of patronage.

In each campaign they promised "fair redistricting" if given the opportunity.

With the convening of the regular session of the Legislature last January an even half-doen senatorial redistricting bills were introduced, five of them by Republicans, and all giving Republicans a substantial majority of the proposed districts, as well as five judicial redistricting measures, designed to take from Democrats and give to Republicans. Hopeful of circumventing a referendum attack on their senatorial redistricting, the Republicans allowed those bills to die, but passed a judicial redistricting measure after a hot fight. This measure was promptly referred by the Democratic State Committee.

Gov. Hyde, Secretary of State Becker and Attorney-General Barrett, aided by the unofficial political sagacity of Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd, all Republicans, then proceeded to lay out new senatorial districts, taking 20 of the 34 in demonstrating their view of a "fair redistricting." It was attacked in the courts and, as has been told, was overthrown by the Supreme Court Saturday on the ground that adoption of the initiative and referendum amendment to the State Constitution had taken from the executive officers their former power to redistrict as to Senators.

Judicial Measure Re-enacted.

At the first extra session of the Legislature, Republicans, having discovered errors in their judicial redistricting bill which had been referred, proceeded to re-enact it, correcting the defects and making a few other changes. Democrats already have taken steps to attack this second bill in court on the ground that it was an effort to circumvent the right of voters of the State to pass on a measure which had been referred. This was done by offering to the Secretary of State for filing, the declaration of Judge Vernon L. Drain of Shelbyville, as a candidate to succeed himself in the old Second Judicial Circuit, which has been changed. The declaration was not received by the Secretary of State, and his action is expected to be the basis of a mandamus suit in the Supreme Court.

No congressional redistricting was attempted at the regular or first extra session of the Legislature, because Missouri Republican members of Congress hoped to get around a referendum attack by getting a rider on the reapportionment bill in Congress to authorize the executive State officers to redistrict. They failed in that, however, and at the second ex-

HUGO STINNES BELIEVES U. S., BRITAIN AND GERMANY CAN STRAIGHTEN OUT THE WORLD

Sketch of German Financier, Owner of Newspapers and Great Industrial Leader, Who Wants to Develop Russia.

In the news developments of the last few days in connection with the internationally absorbing problem of German reparation payments, the question of a moratorium and the German appeal for a British credit, the personality of Hugo Stinnes has become more than ever a matter of public interest. Accordingly, the Post-Dispatch today prints as a communication from Norman G. Thwaites a character study of this power in German business. The Post-Dispatch does so without in any way assuming responsibility for the correspondent's views.

By NORMAN G. THWAITES,
A Special Correspondent.
(Copyright, 1921.)

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Nourished by the imaginative paragraphist and magnified by mystery, the popular conception of Hugo Stinnes is of a sinister, malignant figure which dominates Germany and stretches out evil hands to the lands of his former enemies with financial and political plots for their ruin.

He is represented as the controller of innumerable newspapers with which he corrupts the minds of the world. He is alleged to have been the originator of the policy to seize Belgian women and old men to make them work in German factories and fields against their own country. He is believed to have advocated the destruction of mines and machinery in the lands of Germany's enemies. There is, indeed, no evil German action that was not instigated by this Frankenstein, according to rumor.

Perhaps the portraits that have appeared in the press have something to do with this. Most of them have been ill-taken snapshots and do scant justice to the man.

To begin with, Hugo Stinnes resembles in no single particular either the popular conception of a German or the actual characteristics of the Teuton.

Stinnes' Appearance.

It would be difficult to guess his nationality from his appearance. Put him in a "tarbush" and he might pass for an Egyptian. In a turban he might be an Indian Prince or an Arab Sheik. His swarthiness and general makeup suggest a merchant of the Levant.

Stinnes is about six feet tall, of moderate build, weighing perhaps 150 pounds, upright and muscular. His clothes are somewhat unconventional and give one yet another impression of the man. He might easily be taken for a nonconformist minister in England. He invariably wears a complete suit of black broadcloth, a tailed coat, short upright collar, with simple black bow tie and, perched on his large head, a bowler hat, which always appears to be one size too small for him.

His complexion is dark olive of healthy hue. His head is clipped so short that the skin shows through his very black hair. He wears a closely trimmed beard, which comes to a point. When talking, he fidgets with his beard while his piercing black eyes watch his audience with almost uncanny alertness.

Shows Great Excitement.

On making a new acquaintance he has a manner that appears to be diffident. He is, in fact, a shy man. But when aroused he throws off a somewhat timid manner, his eyes blaze and neither genuinely or for purposes of policy he can work himself into what appears to be a great excitement. His exhibition of temper at the Spa conference last year is more than suspected to have been consummate play-acting. But he makes his point by such means. I saw him the night before he went to Spa. He was rehearsing his speech to a group of friends. He tore his passion to tatters. His usually quiet voice rose to staccato heights, his pale complexion flushed—and then—he suddenly smiled.

The torrents of his eloquence, the fervid passages of his speech were modified by certain colleagues and by the advice of the Wilhelmstrasse, it is said, and at Spa he contented himself with a brief but melodramatic scene, which, however, had the desired effect for his figures—in the matter of coal deliveries especially, repudiated by the conference—have since come very near to being accepted by the conferees.

Merchant and Patriot.

The fact is that Stinnes is a great German merchant, a great patriot and potentially a great world savior. He can mightily help the world in the straightening-out process.

I said to him a year ago that England, of all Germany's enemies, was the least vindictive and the most ready to forgive and forget; that Great Britain would probably be the first to make signs of friendship. Stinnes shook his head. "Germany has no friends—and will have none for a long time to come. She has lost the war in the field. She must pay the penalty."

It was about this time that Stinnes was reported to have bought up 60 or more newspapers. Recently the number has been increased to 70 by an imaginative press man. I challenged Stinnes on this point. He smiled tolerantly. "Perfect nonsense," said he. "I have bought the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, it is true, and some printing works."

Then we fell to talking about the power of the press and of his ideas in regard to what newspapers should be. He complained that there were no independent newspapers in Germany. Every paper was the organ of some political party or of some group. All news was flavored or garbled according to the policy of desires of some political chief.

HUGO STINNES.

Wants Co-Operation of U. S.

Stinnes holds strong views as to the stand England should take in relation to France. He believes England and Germany together, plus the United States, can straighten out the world in a few years and that without the united effort of these countries reconstruction will be long delayed. Even of Russia he has great and immediate hopes; but only if the great Nordic races get together.

He has various plans that would help the world toward economic soundness. I believe he has expressed a suggestion that certain minerals, wherever taken from the earth, should be taxed for the benefit of the world. The plan would be to hand over these funds to the League of Nations or other international body for distribution to the devastated lands. A portion would be used to stabilize currency, to grant long credits to the bankrupt treasuries and to promote international trade. A tax of $1 per ton on all the coal of the world would furnish a fund of $5,000,000,000 annually.

Hugo Stinnes is a self-made man. That is, he made himself a successful business man without the assistance of his father's wealth. The firm of Matthias Stinnes of Muhlheim-in-Ruhr is of old standing. Young Hugo, however, preferred to go his own way and by the time he fell heir to the paternal wealth he had already established himself in a large way of business.

Man of Big Business.

Toward the end of last year I sat on the balcony of the Coblenzeshof Hotel and gazed upon the great Rhine fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, from which waved the Stars and Stripes of the American republic. Every once in a while a string of barges, tugs and other craft would accumulate at the bridge of boats. As the bridge swung back to permit their passage up or down the Rhine I counted those with the name Stinnes upon them. There seemed to be no end to them. In the course of a single day there must appear at least 100 vessels belonging to the Stinnes enterprise.

The commercial commodities they carried were bought at low prices in distressed countries and have by now been sold to countries that can afford to pay and so build up the treasuries of the Stinnes group and enable this remarkable man to enter upon fresh enterprises which are the amazement of the world.

He has coal interests in Belgium acquired before the war, which would seem to refute the charge that he desired the destruction of mines by the German armies. In Scandinavian countries, in the Balkans and in the new republics he has vast enterprises.

Aspires to Develop Russia.

He and his groups are planning further extensions of the canal systems so that the Rhine, Elbe and Oder will be linked up with the Danube at many points and with the Black Sea ports. Cheap water transport is the best means of re-establishing the economic health of these Central European countries, and Stinnes is determined to provide it.

But greater than all his projects of the past, Stinnes aspires to reconstruct and develop the vast territories of Russia and Siberia. In this colossal work he seeks the co-operation of British and American capitalists.

Russia today is as virgin as was the United States a century ago, with this great and important difference: The American continent had to await the arrival of a working population, and rapid as the growth of the American settlements has been, the growth of Russia, with its teeming millions hungry for profitable labor, will be infinitely more rapid once stability of Government, assurance of reward for industry and security of tenure are firmly established.

The man Stinnes is a potent influence for good or for evil. Adversity is said to produce great men. It certainly produces courageous men of affairs. Of courage Stinnes has an abundance.

Believes in British Justice.

Before 1914 Stinnes was not a superlatively wealthy or powerful man. He is one of perhaps half a dozen men who have developed mighty qualities since the war. The moment he acquired the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung Stinnes gave orders that the pin-pricking policy toward England, observable in the German press, should cease so far as his publications were concerned.

GERMANY TO MAKE NEXT PAYMENT, WIRTH DECLARES

Chancellor Says "We Will Carry Out Intentions by Supplying Materials, So Far as Possible.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—Chancellor Wirth, addressing the newspapers yesterday, said it would be delightful "to turn their eyes across the Atlantic and also across the channel, where the discussion of great problems was in progress," but he would forebear touching many of the problems near their hearts. He reiterated, however, Germany's willingness to fulfill her obligations, adding:

"We will in the next few days carry out our sincere intentions by supplying materials, so far as credit on the basis of such materials is possible and their delivery economically possible. But the decision whether there are in the world financiers who are ready to put their money into the reparations pot—a pot without a bottom—rests not with the German Government, not even purely with German industry and finance, but with financiers not resident in Germany."

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—No reassuring word has reached Berlin from Walter Rathenau, former Minister of Reconstruction, now in London, indicating more than a hope that he can amalgamate various private interests and credits into a big enough entity to establish a shorter loan and carry Germany through the next two payments of reparations.

Meanwhile, Chancellor Wirth called a meeting yesterday of a credit committee of nine of the biggest German bankers, whose first duty will be to try to do something to prevent a crash on the bourse today.

The latest reparation note, written in what the newspapers were surprised to find sharp language, has shaken Germany completely out of the notion of a moratorium that it had been nursing, and the country knows the worst.

Play by Government Suspected.

The Government, it is believed, made a successful play on the bourse during the temporary furore for a moratorium, and, it is reported, bought enough foreign notes to give a reserve on which to construct credit. Confirmation on this point is obtainable only through official admissions in the Ministry of Finance. But this cannot prevent a big fall of the mark unless the bankers decide to control the bourse until they get into satisfactory form the credits which unquestionably are being arranged between London and Berlin.

"Woodrow Wilson as I Know Him"

By JOSEPH P. TUMULTY
For 10 Years His Private Secretary.

Biographer Asserts That Fight on League of Nations Grew Out of the Partisan Hatred for Wilson by a Few Leaders in the Senate.

By Joseph T. Tumulty,
For 10 Years Private Secretary to Woodrow Wilson.

THIRTY-FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

UPON his return home from Paris the President immediately invited, in most cordial fashion, the members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to confer with him at the White House. Some of them who received the invitation immediately announced that as a condition precedent to their acceptance they would insist that the conference should not be secret in character and that what would happen there should be disclosed to the public. The President quickly accepted the conditions proposed by the Republican Senators, and made a statement from the White House that the conditions which the conferees named were highly acceptable to him, and that he was willing and anxious to give to the public a stenographic report of everything that transpired.

In view of subsequent history, the conversation between the President and Senator Harding about the distinction between "legal" and "moral" obligations, which was interesting at the time, takes on an added interest. Said Senator Harding: "If there is nothing more than a moral obligation on the part of any members of the league, what avail articles 10 and 11?"

The President: Why, Senator, it is surprising that that question should be asked. If we undertake an obligation, we are bound in the most solemn way to carry it out.

Senator Harding: If you believe that there is nothing more to this than a moral obligation, any nation will assume a moral obligation on its own account. Is it a moral obligation? The point I am trying to get at is: Suppose something arises affecting the peace of the world and the Council takes steps as provided here, to conserve or preserve and announces its decision, and every nation, in the league takes advantage of the construction that you place upon these articles and says: "Well, this is only a moral obligation and we assume that the nation involved does not deserve our participation or protection," and the whole thing amounts to nothing but an expression of the League Council.

The President: There is a national good conscience in such a matter. I should think that was one of the most serious things that could possibly happen. When I speak of a legal obligation I mean one that specifically binds you to do a particular thing under certain sanctions. That is a legal obligation and, if I may say so, has a greater binding force; only there always remains in the moral obligation the right to exercise one's judgment as to whether it is indeed incumbent upon one in those circumstances to do that thing. In every moral obligation there is an element of judgment. In a legal obligation there is no element of judgment.

Facing His Critics.

Never before did the President show himself more tactful or more brilliant in repartee. Surrounded by 20 or 30 men, headed by Senator Lodge, who hated him with a bitterness that was intense, the President with quiet courtesy parried every blow aimed at him.

No question, no matter how pointed it was, seemed to disturb his serenity. He acted like a lawyer who knew his case from top to bottom, and who had confidence in the great cause he was representing. His cards were frankly laid upon the table and he appeared like a fighting champion, ready to meet all comers. Indeed, this very attitude of frankness, openness, sincerity and courtesy, one could see from the side lines, was a cause of discomfort to Senator Lodge and the Republicans grouped about him, and one could also see written upon the faces of the Democratic Senators in that little room a look of pride that they had a leader who carried himself so gallantly and who so brilliantly met every onslaught of the enemy. The President anticipated an abrupt adjournment of the conference with a courteous invitation to luncheon. Senator Lodge had just turned to the President and said: "Mr. President, I do not wish to interfere in any way, but the conference has now lasted about three hours and a half, and it is half an hour after the lunch hour." Whereupon the President said: "Will not you gentlemen take luncheon with me? It will be very delightful."

When Opposition Grew.

It was evident that this invitation, so cordially conveyed, broke the ice of formality which up to that time pervaded the meeting, and, like boys out of school, forgetting the great affair in which they had all played prominent parts, they made their way to the dining room, the President walking by the side of Senator Lodge. Instead of fisticuffs, as some of the newspaper men had predicted, the lion and the lamb sat down together at the dining table and for an hour or two the question of the ratification of the treaty of Versailles was forgotten in the telling of pleasant stories and the play of repartee.

Although at this conference of Aug. 19, 1919, the President had frankly opened his mind and heart to the enemies of the treaty, the opposition instead of moderating seemed to grow more intense and passionate. The President had done everything humanly possible to soften the opposition of the Republicans, but, alas, the information brought to him from the hill by his Democratic friends only confirmed the opinion that the opposition to the treaty was growing and could not be overcome by personal contact of any kind between the President and members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

It is plain now, and will be plainer as the years elapse, that the Republican opposition to the league was primarily partisan politics and a rooted personal dislike of the chief proponent of the league, Mr. Wilson. His re-election in 1916, the first re-election of an incumbent Democratic President since Andrew Jackson, had greatly disturbed the Republican leaders. The prestige of the Republican party was threatened by this Democratic leader. His reception in Europe added to their distress. For the sake of the sacred cause of Republicanism this menace of Democratic leadership must be destroyed, even though in destroying it the leaders should swallow their own words and reverse their own former positions on world adjustment.

An attempt was made by enemies of the President to give the impression to the country that an association of nations was one of the "fool ideas" of Woodrow Wilson; that in making it part of his 14 points he was giving free rein to his idealism. As a matter of fact, the idea did not originate with Woodrow Wilson. If its American origin were traced it would be found that the earliest supporters of the idea were Republicans.

I remember with what reluctance the President accepted the invitation of the League to Enforce Peace, tendered by Mr. Taft, to deliver an address on May 27, 1916, at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, a meeting at which one of the principal speakers was no less a personage than Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, with Mr. Taft presiding. For many months the President had been revolving this idea in his mind and for a long time he was reluctant to accept any invitation that would seem to give approval to the idea. He patiently waited to make a complete survey of the whole world situation to be convinced that the permanent participation of the United States in world affairs was a necessity if peace was to be secured.

Consenting to Discuss Peace.

It was not an easy thing to draw the President away from the traditional policy of aloofness and isolation which had characterized the attitude of the United States in all international affairs. But the invitation to discuss universal peace, urged upon the President by ex-President William H. Taft, was finally accepted.

In that speech he said: "We are participants, whether we would or not, in the life of the world, and the interests of all nations are our own; henceforth there must be a common agreement for a common object, and that at the heart of that common object must lie the inviolable rights of peoples and of mankind. We believe these fundamental things: First, that every people has a right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live. Second, that the small states of the world have a right to enjoy the same respect for their sovereignty and for their territorial integrity that great and powerful nations expect and insist upon. (This idea was substantially embodied in Article X.) And third, that the world has a right to be free from every disturbance of its peace that has its origin in aggression and disregard of the rights of peoples and nations."

These statements were uttered in the presence of Senator Lodge and applauded by Mr. Taft and his Republican associates gathered at the banquet.

Belief in League of Nations.

The President, continuing his address, then gave expression to his views regarding the means to attain these ends. He was convinced that there should be an "universal association of the nations to maintain the inviolate security of the highway of the seas for the common use of all nations of the world, and to prevent any war begun either contrary to treaty agreements or without warning and full submission of the causes to the opinion of the world—a virtual guarantee of territorial integrity and political independence." And he ventured to assert, in the presence of Senator Lodge, who afterward became the leader of the opposition to these very ideas, "that the United States is willing to become a partner in any feasible association of nations formed in order to realize these objects and make them secure against violation."

Woodrow Wilson believed that the League of Nations was the first modern attempt to prevent war by discussion in the open and not behind closed doors, or within the cloistered retreats of European diplomacy. To him the League of Nations was the essence of Christianity. Yet when he took up the advocacy of the League of Nations, Senator Lodge, the spokesman of the Republican party at the dinner of the League to Enforce Peace, became the leader in bitter opposition to it.

Senator Lodge at this very dinner on May 27, 1916, delivered the following address:

I know, and no one, I think, can know better than one who has served long in the Senate, which is charged with an important share of the ratification and confirmation of all treaties, no one can, I think, feel more deeply than I do the difficulties which confront us in the work which this league—that is, the great association extending throughout the country, known as the League to Enforce Peace—undertakes, but the difficulties cannot be overcome unless we try to overcome them. I believe much can be done. Probably it will be impossible to stop all wars, but it certainly will be possible to stop some wars, and thus diminish their number. The way in which this problem must be worked out must be left to this league and to those who are giving this great subject the study which it deserves. I know the obstacles. I know how quickly we shall be met with the statement that this is a dangerous question which you are putting into your argument, that no nation can submit to the judgment of other nations, and we must be careful at the beginning not to attempt too much. I know the difficulties which arise when we speak of anything which seems to involve an alliance, but I do not believe that when Washington warned us against entangling alliances he meant for one moment that we should not join with the other civilized nations of the world if a method could be found to diminish war and encourage peace.

It was a year ago in delivering the Chancellor's address at Union College, I made an argument on this theory, that if we were to promote international peace, at the close of the present terrible war, if we were to restore international law as it must be restored, we must find some way in which the united forces of the nations could be put behind the cause of peace and law. I said then that my hearers might think that I was picturing an Utopia, but it is in the search of Utopias that great discoveries are made. Not failure but low aim is the crime. This league certainly has the highest of all aims for the benefits of humanity, and because the pathway is sown with difficulties is no reason that we should turn from it.

Theodore Roosevelt, in his Nobel Prize thesis, also expressed himself as follows with reference to an association of nations:

The one permanent move for obtaining peace which has yet been suggested with any reasonable chance of obtaining its object is by agreement among the great Powers, in which each should pledge itself not only to abide by the decisions of a common tribunal, but to back with force the decision of that common tribunal. The great civilized nations of the world which do not possess force, actual or immediately potential, should combine by solemn agreement in a great world league for the peace of righteousness.

Upon the President taking up the League of Nations fight, Senator Lodge drew away from it as if in fear and trembling and began discussing our responsibilities abroad, evidencing a complete change of heart. He no longer asked Americans to be generous and fearless, but said:

The hearts of the vast majority of mankind would beat on strongly without any quickening if the League were to perish altogether.

Lodge's First Objection.

The first objection to the League of Nations urged by Senator Lodge was that it involved the surrender of our sovereignty. There is a striking analogy between the argument of Senator Lodge and those put forth by gentlemen in Washington's day who feared that the proposed Constitution which was designed to establish a Federal union would mean danger, oppression and disaster.

Mr. Singletary of Massachusetts, Mr. Lowndes of South Carolina, Mr. Grayson of Virginia, even Patrick Henry himself foresaw the virtual subjugation of the States through a Constitution, which at that time was often called a treaty between the 13 states.

As Senator Brandegee and others contended that the covenant of the League of Nations was a "muddy, murky and muddled document," so Mr. Williams of New York, in 1788, charged "ambiguity" against the proposed Constitution, saying that it was "absolutely impossible to know what we give up and what we retain."

Mandates and similar bogies had their counterpart in Washington's day. George Mason, fearful like Senator Sherman of Illinois in a later day, "apprehended the possibility of Congress calling in the militia of Georgia to quell disturbances in New Hampshire."

Article X as a Focus.

The attitude of George Washington in his day was very similar to that of Woodrow Wilson. Writing to Knox on Aug. 19, 1797, he said: "I am fully persuaded it (meaning the Federal Constitution) is the best that can be obtained at this time. And, as a constitutional door is open for amendment hereafter, our adoption of it, under the present circumstances of the Union is, in my opinion, desirable." And of the opponents of the proposed Constitution, he said: "The major part of them will, it is to be feared, be governed

President Wilson His Own Typist

My Fellow Countrymen: The Congressional elections are at hand. They occur in the most critical period our country has ever faced or is likely to face in our time. If you have approved of my leadership and wish me to continue to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both the Senate and the House of Representatives. I am your servant and will accept your judgment without cavil, but my power to administer the great trust assigned me by the Constitution would be seriously impaired should your judgment be adverse, and I must frankly tell you so because so many critical issues depend upon your verdict. [redacted] No scruple of taste must in grim times like these be allowed to stand in the way of speaking the plain truth.

I have no thought of suggesting that any political party is paramount in matters of patriotism. I feel too keenly the sacrifices which have been made in this war by all our citizens, irrespective of party affiliations, to harbour such an idea. I mean only that the difficulties and delicacies of our present task are of a sort that makes it imperatively necessary that the nation should give its undivided support to the govern-

FORMER President Wilson is an expert in the operation of a typewriter and, during his administration, it was his practice to prepare his notable state papers on his typing machine. It will be interesting to many to see the original first sheet of his now famous appeal for a Democratic Congress in 1918. It was said later that this appeal gave the Republicans their only issue in that election and won the Congress for them. Mr. Wilson, however, has never looked upon it as a mistake, holding that the subsequent events and bitter partisanry of the Republicans clearly showed that he was right.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Crippled Child.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ so much in your Letters for the People and have watched patiently for somebody to write about that awful sickness, infantile paralysis, that perhaps would help some mothers. I have a little girl 4 years old that took sick this summer and was left with one foot paralyzed, and thought perhaps through your valuable paper would be able to do more than I have already tried to do. My child wears a brace and is now able to walk, but limps very badly. Have been giving her electric treatments and massages, and she was sick and sometimes gets very discouraged, so, therefore, am writing this, as so many people read your paper and maybe know of something that will do her good.

I also read of the great Vienna Dr. Lorenz coming to America, and I hope and pray that he comes to St. Louis, as he maybe would help so many little children in that plight.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER.

"Is Borah Weakening?"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR recent editorial, "Is Borah Weakening?" is of much interest. We hardly suspect Senator Borah is weakening. Rather we suspect he is growing much stronger and wiser since, as in the case of President Harding, the reality of facts concerning international conditions calls for the advice of the statesman instead of the partisan politician. Is South America Interested?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHO would imagine that a general Consul of one of the lesser South American republics would think it worth the time and trouble to ask for special information concerning the progress of the anti-alcohol movement in the United States? Yet that such is the case was proven a few months ago when the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Anna Adams Gordon, was visiting South America. She had been speaking on invitation at various places in Buenos Aires, and the Consul-General for the United States of Colombia, resident in Buenos Aires, wrote asking the privilege of an interview on the success of prohibition in the United States. He gave as his reason that the President of his republic was deeply interested and had urged him to use all possible means to get first-hand information, with the idea of possible adoption of a similar policy in the United States of Colombia. The growing interest of South American leaders is evidenced by the fact that the republic of Uruguay, through President Baltasar Brum, has agreed to provide the Liga Contra el Alcoholismo, W. C. T. U., with a suitable building on the ground upon which to erect such a building for their national headquarters. Free transportation is given to all delegates of the liga, and a liberal provision made for instruction concerning alcohol in the public schools. Argentina does not go quite so far, but once a year the Government gives the use, free of charge, of the beautiful Theater Colon in Buenos Aires (one of the three largest and finest theaters in the world) for an anti-alcohol pageant or fiesta by the children of the public schools, trained by the teachers, on which occasion the President of the republic always sends his official representative, a member of his military staff.

"Three Greatest Nations."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE says that Britain and the United States must hang together or hang separately. With the Irish question settled on the principle of the golden rule, there will be no danger of either England or the United States hanging. Let England give Ireland what they have been struggling for for 700 years. Then let England and the United States have a cordial Anglo-American handshake and everyone with a drop of Irish blood in their veins will say, thank God, amen. And the three greatest nations in the world will be united, and no combination can defeat them. R. H. MURPHY.

Working Hours in Building Trades.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE letter of S. W. B., entitled, "Bad Weather and Industry," to any fair-minded person with any knowledge of the subject simply shows either his ignorance or an attempt to mislead the public.

Of course, the same weather obtains for the farmer and the building tradesmen, as it also obtains for the aviator, but other conditions are not the same by any means and when S. W. B. includes all members of the building trades in his remarks he is making a rather broad statement.

I might state the plumber is in greater demand in winter than summer, as is also the steamfitter, but that does not apply to all of us by any means.

Mr. Cassidy is also wrong, because there have been so many building tradesmen created in the last few years that now even in normal times there is not enough work to furnish all with even half-time employment.

That fact answers S. W. B. as to why the building trades stand for an eight-hour day now, more so than ever before. B. W. S.

OUR MEXICAN ATTITUDE.

The obstacle to the recognition of the Obregon Government in Mexico was clearly and fully stated in yesterday's Sunday Post-Dispatch by our Washington correspondent. This is the first complete statement of the Harding administration's position with regard to the Mexican situation and its attitude towards recognition. It amplifies and explains the official statement of June 7, which was a brief exposition of the general principle upon which the State Department stands in dealing with the Obregon Government. The Post-Dispatch can vouch for its accuracy. It is the result of a thorough investigation, with access to all the salient facts.

The statement is timely. It enlightens those who have questioned the attitude of the American Government with respect to the Obregon Government and have pressed the question of recognition, for which there has been a rapidly growing demand, expressed in resolutions, speeches and newspaper interviews and comment.

The Post-Dispatch has pressed the question of recognition and has insisted that, unless there was an insuperable obstacle, recognition ought to be forthcoming and our relations with Mexico established on a good foundation. The statement of the ground upon which the State Department stands is a convincing answer to our question and we believe will clear up the confusion of the public mind and will be accepted as sound and satisfactory.

Secretary Hughes does not ask President Obregon to change the Mexican Constitution, or its laws, but he does insist that the existing Mexican Government shall respect the rights of American citizens in Mexico and that it shall not confiscate property which Americans have validly acquired under Mexican laws. He stands firmly against a confiscatory policy and upon the sound principle of right recognized by every civilized Government as the foundation of amicable relations. The State Department declines to accept mere personal promises of the Mexican President, but insists upon a binding compact of the Mexican nation, under any President or Government, in the form of a treaty. The decision of the Mexican Supreme Court, which President Obregon cites as a satisfactory assurance that retroactive effect will not be given to laws under the present Constitution, is found to be faulty in that it makes possible a large measure of confiscation.

Past experience with Mexico forces the conclusion on the part of the State Department that the time to insure the rights of Americans is before, not after, recognition and the way to insure them is through a treaty. Although the administration is not concerning itself about the Mexican laws except in so far as they affect the rights of Americans, conditions under the present system indicate widespread disaster and if the rights of Americans are not fully assured increasing friction is inevitable and our relations with Mexico will go from bad to worse. In the light of yesterday's exposition of our policy the following clause of the statement of June 7 meets all questions touching recognition:

> The question of the recognition is a subordinate one, but there will be no difficulty as to this, for if Gen. Obregon is ready to negotiate a proper treaty, it will be drawn so as to be negotiated with him, and the making of the treaty in proper form will accomplish the recognition of the Government that makes it. In short, then, it appears that if there is a Government in Mexico willing to bind itself to the discharge of primary international obligations, concurrently with that act its recognition will take place.

We believe the American people will support the administration on this fundamental principle of right. We do not see how good relations can be established with a Government which refuses to recognize and act upon it. Recognition depends upon the Obregon Government.

THE WATERWAYS WIN.

It was a convincing tribute to the value of inland waterways which was paid by the directors of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association in a resolution adopted at Chicago last week. The resolution urges Gov. Small of Illinois to proceed immediately with steps necessary to the completion of a canal from Lockport to Utica, Ill., which would give Chicago access to the Mississippi via the Illinois River.

The resolution recites that the Mississippi and Illinois rivers, which are the great Middle West water highways, should not be cut off from Chicago, the greatest commercial center; that the urgent need of the Illinois waterway is daily being more fully realized; that low-grade lumber, such as that used for boxes, crating and the like, cannot now be placed or used in portions of the river valleys from New Orleans to Chicago because of the present high freight rates which lumber must pay, "but could be used if water transportation could be had," and that "the movement of lumber by water to this district and its economies will go far toward paying annually the full cost of this canal."

This expression in behalf of interests centering in Chicago should make St. Louis "stop, look and listen." We have here, free at our own wharves, what Illinois is spending $30,000,000 to get, and, as the lumbermen's resolution seems to indicate, is not getting. Are we capitalizing that asset to the limit? Are we impressing on the Government the full importance of barge service and needed river improvements? Are we advertising St. Louis' advantages over Chicago, for instance, because of our superior waterway facilities in the river valleys? And, not least of all, are our importers giving their customers any part of the advantage they are able to secure from cheaper water rates?

It has been a great year for waterways in and belonging to the United States. While the railroads have fallen sick on the richness of higher freight rates than the country has ever before known, the Government-owned barge line from St. Louis to New Orleans earned, from April to October, $257,000 over operating expenses, and saved the shippers of St. Louis nearly $400,000. For the fiscal year ending June 30, notwithstanding the general business depression, the Panama Canal enjoyed an unprecedented increase in traffic and earned for the Government $2,750,000 over operating expenses.

The Panama Canal bears a direct and vital relation to the Mississippi waterway system, for it gives Mississippi ports all-water routes without expensive detours to all the world. The annual report of the Governor of the canal zone states that the most important trade route served by the canal was between the east coast of the United States and the west coast of South America. Other principal routes were between the American Atlantic coast and the Far East and between America's Pacific coast and Europe. When Mississippi water transportation possibilities are fully exploited another of the principal routes through the canal will be anchored at one end in the Mississippi Valley.

SENATOR SPENCER'S "NEVER AGAIN."

Senator Spencer of Missouri does not agree with Ambassador Harvey, for instance, that we went into the war to "save our skins;" it was Quixotic altruism. Addressing the Board of Aldermen Friday Mr. Spencer predicted that out of the disarmament conference will come a plan for an association of nations. He did not say what this association will be, but he did say what it will not be. It will not be like that League of Nations which would "require us to send our armies and navies across the ocean to protect the boundary lines of other nations." Mr. Spencer is quoted further as saying:

> The people are opposed to such plans and they feel that not a single American boy should be sent across the waters again for the sake of helping solve the difficulties of other nations.

So, then, it was not that our own safety was imperiled that brought us into the war, nor that we had been peremptorily ordered to get off the seas except for such limited traffic permits as the Imperial Government of Germany decided to grant us. We went in "for the sake of helping solve the difficulties of other nations," but we will never do it "again."

It is impossible positively to say that Mr. Spencer feels that our great decision was a mistake, but his unqualified assertion that "we will never do it again" compels that construction. It is an important contribution to post-bellum literature which Mr. Spencer has made.

Though he never has heard the "shrieking whine of demented shells," our Senator and Dos Passos are brothers in reaction and pacifistic resolve. It is only fair to say, we believe, that, along with his skillful and successful defense of Newberry of Michigan, by which seats in the United States Senate have been put on the auction block, the people of Missouri will make a note, for future reference, of Mr. Spencer's "never-again" city hall speech.

PROHIBITION AND ITS FRUITS.
(Editorial From The Still-at-Home.)

In all kindness, we wish to remind our prohibition neighbors that the failure of their theory in practice is due to a misunderstanding of human nature, and particularly of its tractabieness to force laws for the recasting of social habits. The race has been drinking alcoholic liquors for thousands of years; and, regardless of whether this has been good or bad for it, people have multiplied on the face of the earth civilization has advanced and spread, public health has improved, and temperance has made notable progress because it is basicly meritorious. It means moderation, whether in drinking, eating or the doing of anything else, and is the very antithesis of prohibition. The two are as wide apart as sobriety and drunkenness, or love and hate, or peace and war.

Meanwhile, and inevitably resultant from the ages-old custom of liquor drinking and the spread of democratic ideas of government—which contemplate the largest degree of freedom for the individual consistent with the peace and security of society—the man accustomed to taking a drink regularly, or even only occasionally for his health's sake or to be a good fellow, has come to associate his indulgencies with a fundamental right to their exercise, subject only to the restrictions of nuisance laws. You cannot persuade him that he was in the enjoyment of a privilege hitherto mistakenly permitted him.

With him stands the non-drinking man of liberal, educated, democratic mind, who holds that national prohibition violates a cardinal principle of the Jeffersonian theory of government as incorporated in our political institutions; that it is trespass upon the reserved powers of the States, and that, too, without justification in any need or rightful purpose of Federal sovereignty—and subjects the personal and community liberty of the citizen to the control of a distant centralized government. He is the more strongly opposed to such transference of power as setting a precedent through which organized fanaticism may work further and greater mischief along the same general line.

Gravitating to the side of people of this brand of thinking is the practical business man, who judges a tree by its fruit. He is impressed by not only the failure of national prohibition to accomplish any of the things it promised, but by its peculiar faculty for aggravating the evils it would cure. At a cost of around a billion dollars a year, as measured in liquor revenues lost to national, state and local governments, plus the expenses of attempted enforcement, it has not stopped the selling of liquor by the drink in public places; it has not decreased crime and emptied the jails; it has not saved the drunkard from a drunkard's grave, and it has not translated drink money into terms of shoes and clothing for an unfatherly father's children. On the contrary, it has saturated the country with alcoholic liquors and beverages, mostly vile; has enormously increased the home production, and thereby the home consumption of liquor, as is attested by the sales of grapes, raisins, hops, malt, etc.; has caused a direct property and trade loss of scores of millions to long established manufacturing industries, and has thrown out of work in those and in industries serving or connected with them an incalculably great number of men. More, even, than all that, it has increased crime, brought law into contempt, and contributed to the demoralization of public morals.

No, our prohibition neighbors do not understand. J. E. G.

Monroe County (Mo.) Appeal.

"Old Timer" in the Ashland Bugle last week says: "It makes me tired to hear people talking about us having hard times here now, for the average family is spending as much money in one month as they did in one year 58 years ago. I built a house that spring and was not out over $20 cash. I cut the trees and hauled the logs myself to the mill and had them sawed on the halves and had clapboards for the roof. I made a log pile and broke up limestone on it and burned the lime to daub the cracks. I gave a carpenter $1 per day to make the doors and windows and door casings. There was a killing frost and ice on Aug. 18. Thousands of acres of corn were a total loss. Many things were higher than any time the past year. Coffee and sugar were 50 cents a pound; calico 50 cents a yard, and a great many things on the same scale. We gathered leaves off the weeds and dried them for tea and roasted wheat and rye for coffee. Average farm wages were $10 per month, and there was not over one farmer in 20 that could pay cash for work but about twice a year; that was when they sold their wheat or hogs. Hogs were sold but once a year, and that was generally in December and January. They packed hogs only in cold weather. I bought 10 hogs that averaged over 100 pounds for $5, less than ½ cent a pound in February, 1864. No man could borrow money from the banks without giving two good men as security."

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

AMERICA'S ANGELS OF MERCY.

KATHERINE T. ROCHE in New York World.

AFTER the vile and cowardly attack made several months ago on the floor of the United States Senate by Senator Watson of Georgia on that saintly body of women, women who give up all of the material and physical pleasures and happinesses of life to consecrate their whole being to their God, their country and to humanity, women who since the dawn of Christianity have been found succoring the wounded and comforting the dying on almost every battlefield of the world—I refer to that noble body of women, the nuns of the Roman Catholic Church, whose pure and holy lives have been an example and precept for centuries to Christian and pagan alike—not satisfied with his attack on these defenseless women, in the last few days Mr. Watson has trained his guns on that other angel of mercy, the American nurse, than whom civilization holds no nobler product. The American nurse volunteers her time and her life that her country may live. There is not in the world today a more noble, self-sacrificing woman than the American nurse. Where in the boasted chivalry of our race, where in the vaunted gallantry of our manhood, if the former can be converted into a mud geyser through which the character and reputation of American womanhood can be pulled and dragged by one of its members?

STATE PARKS.

From the New York Post.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago how many Americans had heard or thought of state parks? Now 26 states possess them. New York and New Jersey deserve the credit for first calling general attention to their usefulness by setting aside the Palisades Interstate Park in 1900. A writer in the National Municipal Review shows that the Middle West is responding energetically to the idea. Wisconsin had John Nolen to defend such parks in the days when defense was necessary. Since her State Park Board was created in 1907 she has acquired eight tracts, the largest containing 5000 acres. The Starved Rock Park of Illinois, a State which fell in after Wisconsin, is famous. Indiana, with four parks, is still debating the acquisition of eight miles of dunes to save these unique formations and at the same time to give the northern industrial towns a camping spot. Iowa has appropriated $100,000 a year for creating and maintaining parks, and boasts its peculiar faculty for making parks on the prairies, she has a natural bridge equaling Virginia's, caves of as great scientific value as Kentucky's, and lakes like those of Switzerland. Unfortunately, some states that should be most active are idle. Pennsylvania, with so much splendid scenery, has only five small parks, the interest of which is historical rather than scenic.

INDIAN NAMES.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

SIOUX INDIANS gave Marshal Foch a pow-wow at the pipe of peace, which insures the future amity of France and the Sioux Nation, and then named him "Charging Thunder." This is a reminder that we owe a debt to American red men because of the poetry and aptness of their proper names and terms. "Charging Thunder" is a happy cognomen for the French warrior. A D'Annunzio, with all his scholarship, could not improve upon it. What prettier names have come down to us through the ages than Hiawatha, Minnehaha, Oklahoma, Shenandoah, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Tuscaloosa, Tallapoosa, and a thousand and one other names of states, cities, counties and streams? In the South, particularly Georgia, Oklahoma and Alabama, our heritage of beautiful Indian names has been more faithfully preserved than in other parts of the country, and possibly in Middle West. In Alabama, Georgia and Oklahoma a majority of the natural streams bear pleasant Indian names, and so with town after town in these states.

"MIDNIGHT ROUNDERS" STILL HAS SAME NAME

Otherwise One Might Not Recognize Show Proclaimed as Century Roof Revue.

One would fancy the theatrical slump a mere myth, after having seen the great and blithesome audience that filled nearly every seat last night at the Shubert-Jefferson. The occasion was the opening presentation of "Midnight Rounders," advertised as a New York Century Theater Promenade Revue.

Let it be said at once that not a great deal more than the title now remains of that tingling and beautiful production which formed the "Midnight Rounders" of the Century roof. Of 29 scenes brought forward last night, only 13, it appears, are survivors from the original list. The thrilling tempo has slackened, though the pace is still lively.

Vanished from the cast are such names as those of Theodore Zambouni and Kathleen O'Hanlon, Ted Lorraine and Gladys Walton, Tot Qualters, Rosie Quinn and Madelon de Varre. Harry Kelley and Lew Hearn, around whom the show revolved, have been revised almost out of existence, and great cavities have been blasted in the structure, to make room for Eddie Cantor, that strident aspirant to the technique of Al Jolson, with his protruding eyeballs, agile prance, indelicate songs and gags that skirt the vulgar or even the pathological.

Nan Halperin's Songs.

Though most of the pristine glamour and enchantment have fled, it is still an entertaining show, and the first-night audience seemed thoroughly pleased. Nan Halperin, another newcomer in the cast, proved worthy of a place in the original production, so much personality did she put into her song specialties. The big chorus has youth and will assay in good looks rather higher than the usual samples, which get as far into the hinterland as St. Louis.

The music is of the zippy brand which all of our concoctors of popular scores have learned to write. Some of the singing is good and some feeble. Most of the dancing is excellent. There are some episodes in which costumes, scenery and lighting combine to give a touch of esthetic pleasure.

All of Cantor's scenes except one are interpolations. He is first beheld as a comedian looking for a job. Next he has a variant of his old osteopathic act in the Ziegfeld "Follies;" at present he visits a doctor's office to be examined for life insurance, tries to talk with a thermometer in his mouth, and gets entangled with an electrical machine. In the funniest skit of the show he is an East Side salesman in a clothing store, going to every length short of murder to prevent a customer from escaping without a purchase.

Boomed by a Claque.

Finally he appears in blackface on the runway, and sings ditties, the titles of which are shouted from the audience by a claque of song-plugging. By various stratagems this was made to seem the most popular incident of the evening; and the calculated reappearances of a young woman to begin the next scene, only to retreat again and again into the wings while Cantor returned for just another song, gave the impression that the star was "stopping the show."

One of the most pleasing numbers, called "The Story of the Waltz," Couples in appropriate costumes dance to the strains of "The Blue Danube," "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier;" "Beautiful Lady," from "The Pink Lady;" and the famous waltzes in "The Merry Widow" and "The Count of Luxemburg."

Another pretty scene is entitled "The Sphinx Vision Girl," with a ballet of odalisques tripping in an Egyptian setting. And the most sumptuous episode of all is a fantasy, "The Wedding of the Sun and the Moon," which rises towards the ideals of a dramatic ballet of the Russians.

For the sake of the record, there may be listed the scenes still surviving from the original show: "Heart Burglars," "The Sphinx Vision Girl," "A Mouthful of Kisses," "Symphony in Dress," "Winter Garden Stage Door," "Cafe de la Paix," "The Wedding of the Sun and the Moon," "Swing Song," "The Story of the Waltz," "The Storytellers," "Heavenly Body," "Looking Backwards" and "Century Promenade."

After all, the present production, which comes from Chicago by way of Kansas City, plays at a "$2.50 top"; the original Century roof entertainment was a $5 show.

WHITTLESEY MEMORIAL SERVICE

New Yorkers Pay Tribute to Commander of "Lost Battalion."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—In a simple service, half religious, half military, more than a thousand persons last night paid tribute to the memory of Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey, commander of the famous "Lost Battalion" of the Argonne, who disappeared from a vessel bound for Havana a week ago yesterday.

His death was a battle casualty as much in the line of duty as though he had fallen by a German bullet. The scars of conflict or the wounds of battle are not always of the flesh," said Col. Nathan V. Averill, commander of the 308th Infantry.

Frank Whittlesey, the war hero's father, and Meiner Whittlesey, his brother, were among those who attended the memorial services, held in the Seventy-first Armory. Other were representatives of veterans' organizations and college societies and former acquaintances.

"HER SOCIAL VALUE" EXPLOITS FILM BEAUTY

Herbert Bosworth Has Strong Dramatic Role in "The Cup of Life."

Exploitation of the beauty of Katherine MacDonald seems to have been the prime purpose in producing "Her Social Value," the principal picture offering at the New Grand Central. Along toward the middle of the picture the action develops into a succession of close-ups of the star giving facial expression to various phases of emotionalism. Roy Stewart has the leading masculine role.

Once more we have that favorite movie situation where the hero marries beneath his social position, the result being that his wife is snubbed by his family and associates and is made to feel that she is hampering him in his career. The husband is an engineer who has drawn some precious "terminal plans." There is a villain who covets the wife and the plans. He persuades her that the only way to gain and hold her husband's love is to make him think she loves another. She plans an elopement with the villain who traps her in his office and tries to steal the plans. The husband takes the elopement seriously and goes West. The wife follows him. There is an earthquake scene for a thriller and when the husband wakes up after being dug out of the ruins of his cabin he finds his wife kneeling by his side.

An added feature at the New Grand Central is the personal appearance of Victor Herbert, who leads an augmented orchestra in playing a number of his best known compositions. The program includes the overture to "Mlle. Modiste," the intermezzo from "Naughty Marietta," "Devotion," the Cazardas from "The Fortune Teller" and the overture to "Eileen."

Bosworth's Gripping Film.

The West End Lyric has a rather good bill, consisting of a Ben Turpin comedy, plus "The Cup of Life," a colorful adventure story starring Hobart Bosworth.

Turpin appears as defendant in the Divorce Court. The testimony against him is reproduced in the scenes which follow. To say nothing of plot, there is but the bare suggestion of coherence, the picture being laid on frankly slapstick lines. The whole thing is idiotically funny.

Hobart Bosworth comes into the current melange of neurotic film romances as a breath of clean air, tinged with the savor of salt. "The Cup of Life" strains credibility at points, but it is wholesome, it is beautiful, and it has action, humor and sharp changes of color.

"Pain" is the orphaned daughter of an American resident of Singaport, and she has been reared by Chan Chang, a wily old Chinese merchant who adopted her. Bosworth has the role of Cap'n Brand, a pearl poacher, who is a likable allround adventurer, fighter and scoundrel. His son has just graduated from Harvard, and joins him at Singapore.

The captain has a pearl that Chan wants. The poacher refuses to sell, declaring that he intends giving it to a pretty woman. When next Chan sees the pearl it is in his adopted daughter's necklace. The fact is, of course, that it has been given to her by young Brand, who had received it as a gift from his father, but Chan accuses his daughter and the sea captain. To save the boy, both falsely admit guilt.

Chan sends young Brand into a dark room with his father, telling him that the one which emerges alive will marry "Pain." Then occurs a great fight between father and son, neither knowing whom he is fighting, which ends when the captain, with a terrific smash, knocks his son through the wall. Then he recognizes his insensible victim, the truth comes out, the wily Oriental is confounded and all ends well.

"The Sheik," with Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres, which broke all house records at the Missouri last week, is continuing for another week at that house.

At the Liberty "The Queen of Sheba," a really big Fox production with Betty Blythe in its leading role, went into its second week.

YELLOW FEVER AUTHORITY DIES

Dr. Earl C. Carr a Victim of Heart Disease at 60.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 5.—Dr. Earl C. Carr, nationally recognized authority on yellow fever, was found dead in his room at a hotel here yesterday, a victim of heart disease.

Dr. Carr, who was 66 years old, was appointed surgeon-in-chief at San Diego soon after the war was declared with Spain and later became a Major, in which capacity he served with Gen. John J. Pershing in the Philippines. He was unmarried.

tra session a bill giving Republicans 11 of the 16 districts was enacted. The Democratic State Committee will meet within 10 days, its secretary has announced, to take up a proposal that this bill be referred.

Meantime, the Legislature at the regular session had enacted some of the Governor's consolidation bills, in which he sought to gather more closely the power vested in his appointees, but only after bitter struggles, in some of which relations between the Governor and the other elective State officials, all Republicans, became strained because he had reached into their patronage domains. After that the Democrats referred most of the consolidation legislation.

Hyde's Nominees Rejected.

On top of those difficulties the State Senate at the second extra session refused to confirm two of the Governor's favorite appointees, Todd N. Ormiston, who had been Hyde's secretary, and who was turned down for State Inspector of Oils, and Alfred W. McCawley, who, as a Democrat, had drawn many of Hyde's consolidation bills and steered them through the Legislature for him, who was rejected as a member of the State Tax Commission.

Through all this period there has been constant sniping between the Hyde faction of the Republican party, regarded as the "housecleaners" and the "old guard," headed by Republican National Committeeman Jacob L. Babler, Walter S. Dickey and their coterie of leaders. This fight has involved both State and Federal patronage. The result has been that the "old guard" has had little or no recognition from Hyde, while Babler and his friends have prevented supporters of the "housecleaners" from landing anything substantial in Federal jobs.

And so the first 11 months of the administration have been very trying to the Governor and his supporters, who, since the decision of Saturday, are much disquieted by the fear that Democrats next year might elect 11 of the 17 State Senators to be chosen, and so regain control of the Senate. They realize that after efforts of the administration to dispossess holdover Democratic jobholders, it need expect little quarter from a Legislature on which the opposition party has much of a hold.

Of the 17 districts in which Senators will be elected next year, nine elected Republicans in 1918 and eight returned Democrats. Results in three of the districts which chose Republicans were close.

Thus, instead of being secure in the enjoyment of the fruits of their landslide victory, won only after many years of disheartening losses, the party which at the moment dominates the State faces the necessity of going into a critical contest in the very first election after that victory.

For nearly all of the Governor's legislative program which got through the Legislature will be at issue next November, besides the control of the Legislature, which Republicans need to aid them in intrenching for a long tenure of power.

$50,000 FOR PALESTINE FUND QUICKLY RAISED

Convention Hears Jewish Leaders Talk on Plan to Establish a Homeland.

More than $50,000 was raised by subscription yesterday afternoon at the Keren Haysod Sokolow convention at the Planters Hotel, toward the $600,000 which is St. Louis' quota of the $9,000,000 Palestine foundation fund for the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine. Jewish organizations of the city are to give $60,000.

There were nearly 1000 delegates, representing 102 organizations, at the convention, which was called by the Zionist organization of St. Louis. Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Kansas, comprising the Southwestern district, were represented.

Gustave Cytron of St. Louis was chairman and Rabbi Samuel Sale and Judge Moses Hartmann were honorary chairmen. Cytron announced that President Harding had indorsed the plan and that the American Government would assist in every way possible.

Rabbi Sale made an appeal for relief for the persecuted Jews of Europe to enable them to go back to Palestine. The object of rebuilding Palestine, he said, was not to transport there all Jews to live, but to offer a home and a place of refuge to the wandering and persecuted Jews of Europe and give them a country of their own where their religion would not be suppressed, where their literature could be developed and where they could live in peace and security. Rabbi A. B. Goldenson also spoke at the morning session.

At the afternoon session, Rabbi J. R. Mazur of East St. Louis emphasized the need of American Jews making sacrifices to aid their brothers in Russia, Poland and Ukrania.

Rabbi Leon Harrison said the rehabilitation of Palestine would end a large part of Jewish misery and provide not only a place of refuge and safety for the body but for the spirit, where genius and religion would again flourish.

Rabbi Simon Glazer of Kansas City declared that not only the Government at Washington but the political leaders of all the states represented at the convention were doing all that they could to aid the movement.

Rabbi Samuel Thurman made an appeal for the starving women and children of Europe. Max Shulman of Chicago said the movement would succeed in spite of any opposition that may exist. Mrs. Sophia G. Greenberg, secretary of the convention, gave the declamation, "The Call of the Chalutzim."

"Bess, you EXTRAVAGANT girl, what a scrumptious cake! Where DID you buy it?"

"I didn't Judy. I made it all my own self! Made it with Valier's Enterprise Flour, too,—so its an economy and no extravagance!"

What woman dislikes praise for what she bakes herself?

BAKING elaborate cakes becomes a pleasant task when you absolutely know your receipe is coming out of the oven right! With Valier's Enterprise Flour, you do know!

Paying somewhat more for this Flour, made from the creamy hearts of the finest hard wheat that grows—that may seem extravagant.

Buying such wheat at a premium price, and using only the rich kernels of it— that seems extravagant, too.

But when such wheat makes a Flour that goes so much farther, and gives such rich, fine flavor to all you bake from it—

That is no extravagance. That is real economy!

by sinister and self-important motives."

The storm center of the whole fight against the league was the opposition personally conducted by Senator Lodge and others of the Republican party against the now-famous Article X. The basis of the whole Republican opposition was their fear that America would have to bear some responsibility in the affairs of the world, while the strength of Woodrow Wilson's position was his faith that out of the war, with all its blood and tears, would come this great consummation.

It was the President's idea that we should go into the league and bear our responsibilities; that we should enter it as gentlemen, scorning privilege. He did not wish us to sneak in and enjoy its advantages and shirk its responsibilities, but he wanted America to enter boldly, and not as a hypocrite.

With reference to the argument made by Senator Lodge against our going into the league, saying that it would be a surrender of American sovereignty and a loss of her freedom, the President often asked the question on his Western trip: How can a nation preserve its freedom except through concerted action? We surrender part of our freedom in order to save the rest of it. Discussing this matter one day, he said: "One cannot have an omelet without breaking eggs. By joining the League of Nations, a nation loses not its individual freedom but its selfish isolation. The only freedom it loses is the freedom to do wrong. Robinson Crusoe was free to shoot in any direction on his island until Friday came. Then there was one direction in which he could not shoot. His freedom ended where Friday's rights began."

Aim of the Opposition.

There would have been no Federal Union today if the individual states that went to make up the Federal Union were not willing to surrender the powers they exercised, to surrender their freedom as it were.

Opponents of the league tried to convey the impression that under Article X we should be obliged to send our boys across the sea and that in that event America's voice would not be the determining voice.

Lloyd George answered this argument in a crushing way when he said:

We cannot, unless we abandon the whole basis of the League of Nations, disinterest ourselves in an attack upon the existence of a nation which is a member of that league and whose life is in jeopardy. That covenant, as I understand it, does not contemplate, necessarily, military action in support of the imperiled nation. It contemplates economic pressure; it contemplates support for the struggling people; and when it is said that if you give any support at all to Poland it involves a great war, with conscription and with all the mechanism of war with which we have been so familiar in the last few years, that it is inconsistent with the whole theory of the covenant into which we have entered. We contemplated other methods of bringing pressure to bear upon the recalcitrant nation that is guilty of acts of aggression against other nations and endangering their independence.

The Republicans who attacked the President on article 10 had evidently forgotten what Theodore Roosevelt said about the one effective move for obtaining peace, when he urged: "The nations should agree on certain rights that should not be questioned, such as territorial integrity, their rights to deal with their domestic affairs, and with such matters as whom they should admit to citizenship." They had, also, evidently forgotten that Mr. Taft said: "The arguments against article 10, which have been most pressed are those directed to showing that under its obligations the United States can be forced into many wars and to burdensome expeditionary forces to protect countries in which it has no legitimate interest. This objection will not bear examination."

Taft's Attitude.

Mr. Taft answered the question of one of the Republican critics if article 10 would not involve us in war, in the following statement:

How much will it involve us in war? Little, if any. In the first place, the universal boycott, first to be applied, will impose upon most nations such a withering isolation and starvation that in most cases it will be effective. In the second place, we'll not be drawn into any war in which it will not be reasonable and convenient for us to render efficient aid, because the plan of the Council must be approved by our representatives, as already explained. In the third place, the threat of the universal boycott and the union of overwhelming forces of the members of the league, if need be, will hold every nation from violating Article X and Articles XII, XIII and XV, unless there is a world conspiracy, as in this war, in which case the earliest we get into the war the better.

Evidently Mr. Taft did not look upon article 10 as the bugaboo that Mr. Lodge pretended it was, for he said:

Article X covers the Monroe Doctrine and extends it to the world. The league is not a supersovereign, but a partnership intended to secure to us and all nations only the sovereignty we can properly have, i. e., sovereignty regulated by the international law and morality consistent with the same sovereignty of other nations. The United States is not under this constitution to be forced into actual war against its will. This league is to be regarded in conflict with the advice of Washington only from a narrow and reactionary viewpoint.

Herbert Hoover, now a member of Mr. Harding's Cabinet, in a speech delivered on Oct. 3, 1919, answering the argument that America would be compelled to send her boys to the other side, said:

"We hear the cry that the league obligates that our sons be sent to fight in foreign lands. Yet the very intent and structure of the league is to prevent wars. There is no obligation for the United States to engage in military operations or to allow any interference with our internal affairs without the full consent of our representatives in the league."

And further discussing the revision of the treaty, Mr. Hoover said:

"I am confident that if we attempt now to revise the treaty we shall tread on a road through European chaos. Even if we manage to keep our soldiers out of it we will not escape fearful economic losses. If the league is to break down we must at once prepare to fight. Few people seem to realize the desperation to which Europe has been reduced."

Scullins Defeat Johnston City in Third Round Tilt

St. Louis Soccer Entry Gains 2-0 Victory Over Illinois Eleven on Muddy Field.

VISITORS LACK PUNCH

The Scullins of the St. Louis Soccer League advanced to the fourth round in the United States Football Association cup competition, defeating Johnston City (Ill.) 2 goals to 0, at High School Field yesterday. In a preliminary game the De Andreis eleven increased its league lead to 3 points by downing the Ben Millers, 4—1. More than 3100 paid to see the twin bill.

Ability to take advantage of openings gave the Scullins the victory over the foreign-born eleven from Illinois. Because of the heavy field, a great portion of the play was between the two penalty lines. However, on two occasions, the locals broke through the visitors' defense for scores.

Like most of the foreign elevens that have appeared in contests in St. Louis, Johnston City, exhibited a great passing game. The visitors outpassed the Scullins, but they lacked the punch. Once inside the penalty area, Johnston City athletes were lost. Statistics on the contest show that during the 90 minutes of battling, the enemy had only two real shots at goal. Both these were taken from outside the penalty area and went directly into the hands of Oellerman. Oellerman had one of the softest days a local "goalie" has enjoyed in some time.

Schwarz Scores First Goal.

Johnston City started with a rush, and using a short pass effectively, soon was inside the Scullin penalty area. However, when this point was reached they were lost and instead of shooting the visitors tried to rush the ball through the uprights. Then Tate Brady and Bentley, fullbacks, broke up their play. Many of the visitors' attempts at goal did not come even close.

After the visitors had their chance the Scullins got busy. After seven minutes Bechtold carried the ball down the right side and passed to center. Dike Brannigan took a shot which was cleared by Pearson. Two minutes later Emmett Mulvey missed a wide opening.

The Scullins counted the first point of the game after 13 minutes of play. Bechtold again carried the ball down on the right wing and crossed to center. There was a scrimmage in front of the upright, with Brannigan and Mulvey taking shots, which were cleared by the backs. Finally, however, the ball went to Elmer Schwarz, standing in the mouth of the goal, and he tapped it through. The visitors claimed it was an off-side play, but Referee Kavanaugh allowed the goal. There was no further scoring in the opening period.

Brady Gets Second Point.

Although they had several good chances, the Scullins were unable to tally again until after 15 minutes of play in the closing period. Then Mulvey crossed to Cliff Brady, who banged the sphere past Pearson. After this point most of the play was between the two penalty areas.

The Scullins played without Tommy O'Hanlon, but Jimmy Nolan, taking his place, put up a great game. "Dike" Brannigan, back on the front line, also played well. In the first half, Charley Bechtold was warned for illegal charging. Brady and Bentley played great soccer for the Scullins.

	Scullins.	J. C.
Shots	13	2
Stopped	2	6
Corners	8	1
Offside	3	3
Fouls	4	2
Free kicks	5	7

In the preliminary contest, the DeAndreis youngsters completely outplayed the Millers. The game clearly showed that the national champions of two years ago, who are still in the cup competition, are badly in need of backs. The Millers were first to score, Larry Riley scoring during a scrimmage in front of the uprights after 10 minutes of play.

Five minutes later the DeAndreis tied the count. It was a pretty goal, McCaffery shooting after Kehrman and Fitzgerald had carried the ball down field. Near the close of the first half, Donovan carried the sphere into the penalty area, passed to McCaffery, who in turn handed it to Fitzgerald, who scored.

Starting the second period, Sutter, Miller "goalie" cleared no fewer than five shots. However, the DeAndreis kept plugging, and after 20 minutes Donovan scored on a cross from Kehrman. A pass from Donovan to McCaffery netted the final goal near the end of the contest.

Next Sunday the Millers oppose the Paulians of the Municipal League in a third round cup game, while the Scullins tackle the Screw Co. in the preliminary.

Yesterday's cup game lineup:

"Big Three" Puts Six Players on Roper's All-Eastern Football Team

Princeton, Yale and Harvard Get Two Places Each—Penn State Also Lands Two Berths, With Navy, Lafayette and W. and J. Each Gaining One—Difficult to Choose in Many Instances.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.
Head Coach Princeton.

At the very beginning of this article, I want to admit I am starting on an almost impossible task in trying to select an all Eastern football team. There is such a wealth of good material on the big teams. There are also so many playing on the smaller elevens, practically unknown, who if given the proper support, would shine. So it becomes a mighty hard job to even approximate the strongest combination. There are a lot of first-class men who have been badly handicapped by injuries. I have tried to take all these considerations into account in making my final selection.

I have followed the play of Amherst, the Army, Brown, Bucknell, Carnegie Tech, Colgate, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Georgetown, Harvard, Holy Cross, Lafayette, Lehigh, the Navy, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Pittsburg, Penn State, Swarthmore, Washington and Jefferson, Williams and Yale. In my opinion these are the most representative teams in the East. So I have made my selections for an all-Eastern team from the men composing these teams.

I have less difficulty in selecting the center rush than any other position on the rush line. And this is not because of any dearth of material, either. In my opinion, Witmer of Princeton is the outstanding line man of the year, and the best center rush that has ever stood in the center of a Princeton line. Prior to this fall Witmer played fullback. As a defensive back he had few equals. At the end of the 1920 season it seemed best to utilize his great defensive qualities by playing him center rush the following year.

Taught Himself to Pass.

Under modern conditions the defensive center plays out of the line as much as in it. Soon as he heard of the shift, Witmer got hold of a football and taught himself to pass. He practiced all winter and summer. As a result he passed beautifully in every game of the season. His defensive work was of even higher order than I anticipated, while he made more tackles down the field than the ends.

In the first few minutes of the Harvard game Witmer tore the ligaments of his right knee very badly. Any ordinary man would have left the game when the injury was received. And no one possibly could have blamed him for so doing. Witmer is made of different stuff and played through the entire game. A week later he got out of bed and played against Yale.

Football is certainly a great school in which to develop character and grit. But never in my football experience have I seen a greater exhibition of pluck and determination than shown by H. L. Witmer in these two games. I believe he will go down as one of the greatest centers of the game. Clarke of Harvard, Larsen of the Navy and Stein of Pittsburg played mighty fine games at center, but none of them, in my opinion, equal Witmer in all-around ability.

Many Good Guards.

Brown of Harvard, Schwab of Lafayette, Cruikshank of Yale, Welsh of Colgate, Neal of Washington and Jefferson, Garbisch of the Army, Bedenk and Bentz of Penn State look to me like the best guards in the East.

Brown and Schwab are my final choice. Both are strong and fast, and equally good on offense and defense. Brown was a tower of strength in the Harvard line all fall, while little if any distance was made through Schwab.

Walsh of Colgate deserves more credit than he has received, while Cruikshank is a very hard, aggressive player.

For tackle I pick Keck of Princeton and Stein of Washington and Jefferson, with King of the Navy, Into of Yale and Dodge, Cornell, next in order. Keck and Stein get the call because of their wonderful offensive play. Stein alternated between end and tackle, but his real position is tackle. Keck was handicapped by injuries and was hardly up to his last year's form on the defense. He is the best offensive tackle I have ever seen and a wonderful interferer. Keck is also a very accurate place kicker. Any team with these two men on the line of scrimmage is going to gain ground at or near tackle.

McCollum and Sturm Ends.

McCollum, Penn State, and Sturm, Yale, are my selections for end. They are both good defensive men and sure in boxing a tackle. A good end must vary his defense to meet each situation that he faces. I like to see an end able and willing to smash interference or come in high, using his hands and waiting for the runner or crowding him in for the tackle. McCollum and Sturm are able to vary their play effectively.

Unfortunately Ed Stinson of Princeton was injured in the first play of the Yale game. Had he been able to stay in this game and had he put up the same game he played against Harvard, I would have seriously considered him for one of the end positions. Stinson is a great offensive end, and the best man taking a tackle I have ever seen.

Munns, Cornell, Macomber, Harvard; Taylor, Navy; Kopf, Washington and Jefferson, and Williams, Pittsburg, deserve honorable mention. Blair of Yale is a great end. Unfortunately, injuries kept him out of the final game.

Roper's All-Eastern Team

Position.	Name.	School.
L. E.	McCollum	Penn State
L. T.	Stein	W. & J
L. G.	Brown	Harvard
C.	Witmer	Princeton
R. G.	Schwab	Lafayette
R. T.	Keck	Princeton
R. E.	Sturm	Yale
Q.	Killinger	Penn State
L. H.	Aldrich	Yale
R. H.	Barchet	Navy
F. B.	Owen	Harvard

Brains and Brawn.

The winning football team is always built around a man who has brains to think with and uses them principally for that purpose. The man who comes nearest to filling this description is the right man for the quarterback position. I would much prefer a man with brains for quarterback even though he may have fewer physical qualifications. But when you get a combination of both, I prefer, of course, to use the man who can fill the double bill.

There are three men in a class by themselves for the position of quarterback—Killinger of Penn State; Louri, Princeton, and Buell, Harvard. Killinger is a very hard running back, a rare punt catcher and good interferer. Lourie is just as good as Killinger when he is in shape.

Both Killinger and Lourie are a little inferior to Buell in field generalship and they are both better individual players. I admit Buell is a great strategist and a very magnetic personality. Any team is fortunate with any of them in the pilot's position. As Lourie was unable to play until the Harvard game because of injuries, while Killinger played beautifully all fall, I feel that the Penn State man deserves the place.

Aldrich Gains a Place.

There is a wealth of material for the other three backfield positions. Aldrich, Yale, is the greatest running back of the year, and one of the greatest backs I have ever seen. In addition, he is a beautiful punter and a very good defensive man. As a leader he has had few equals in the Yale field.

Robinson, the Brown coach, told me toward the latter part of the 1919 season to watch a Yale back with a russet headgear. He didn't play against Princeton, but got in the second half of the Yale-Harvard game. Soon as I saw Aldrich carry the ball I said:

"I am mighty glad that man was on the side lines against us."

Balanced Backfield.

It is a more difficult task to select the other two backs. Owen, Harvard; Kaw, Cornell; Gilroy, Princeton; Davies and Holleran, Pittsburg; Robertson, Dartmouth; Barchet, Navy; French, Army; Webster, Colgate; Lightner, Penn State; Jordan, Yale, and Erickson, Washington and Jefferson, with a host of others, are entitled to consideration.

The team already has two wonderful backs in Aldrich and Killinger. Owen is the best man at hitting a line I have seen this fall. He is also a powerful defensive back and a mighty good interferer. He deserves a place because of his line-breaking ability.

My choice for the fourth back narrows down to Davies, Kaw, French and Barchet. Davies and French are mighty good in an open field, but not as good as Killinger and Aldrich.

I pick Barchet because he is one of the hardest running backs of the year, with a remarkable ability to keep his feet. He is a first-class defensive man and a beautiful interferer.

Kaw is a great running back, but he has not faced the opposition Barchet has all fall. Under these circumstances I feel the Navy man deserves the place, though I would like to have both men on the team.

Gibbons to Box Augie Ratner in 12-Round Battle

Veteran St. Paul Midleweight Is Making Final Drive to Win Championship.

Mike Gibbons, the 34-year-old phantom, who is making his final drive for the middle weight championship, and Augie Ratner of New York, are scheduled to box 12 rounds in the feature bout of the Angelica Club show at the Coliseum tonight. Gibbons and Ratner will box at catchweights and each will weigh around 160 pounds.

Gibbons, at present, is one of the busiest boxers in the country. Since last May he has engaged in 22 battles and recently had been boxing every two or three nights. His last bout was a 12-round draw with Phil Krug at Newark last Thursday. Following the contest here, Gibbons meets Mike O'Dowd, Dec. 16. On the first of the year Gibbons sails for England.

Ratner, Gibbons' opponent tonight, will be making his first appearance in six weeks. Last August he was defeated by the St. Paul phantom in the East. He is considered one of the best middleweights in the game.

Gibbons tonight will be making his second appearance in St. Louis. Two years ago he met and defeated Leo Houck in a bout at the Coliseum.

The remainder of the card is as follows:

Walter Heisner will referee.

Chicago Bowlers Set World Record

Danek and Hradek Score 1353 in Doubles of Mid-West Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 5—J. Danek and J. Hradek of Chicago, shot a score of 1353 here yesterday in the doubles, which put them in first place in the Mid-West bowling tournament and also broke the world's tournament record. The old record was 1346, made in 1917, at the A. B. C. by G. Sartorius and W. Holzschuh of Peoria.

F. Kafora and R. Davis of Chicago went into second place in the doubles with a score of 1317.

D. Devito rolled the highest singles of the day, 659, which earned him eleventh position.

The Toledo Valley Brand team rolled the highest score in the five-man event, shooting 2754. This will probably barely land them in the money class. None of the other teams on the alleys shot above the 2700 mark.

PULLMANS AND SIMMONS WIN IN CUP CONTESTS

The Pullmans and Simmons F. C. of Kenosha, Wis., were the winners in the third round United States Football Association cup ties in the Wisconsin-Illinois District played yesterday. The Pullmans defeated the Rangers, 2—0, after an extra half hour.

The game between Simmons and the Bricklayers of Chicago, which the Kenosha team won, 4—2, was played under protest, according to a wire from W. R. Cummings of Chicago, a member of the Western Cup Committee.

Staleys Claim Title

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—The Decatur Staleys have laid claim to the national professional football championship as a result of their 10-to-7 victory over the Buffalo eleven yesterday. Chamberlain, former University of Nebraska player, starred for the Staleys and Oliphant, former Army player, drew considerable attention on the Buffalo team.

Schaefer to Play Conti.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Jake Schaefer, world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, will meet Roger Conti, the French cue star, in the first round of a 3200-point match today.

Rickey Announces He'll Try to Block Heine Groh Deal

Cardinal Leader, Departing for East, Says Sale Would Be "Crime Against Baseball."

Branch Rickey, just before departing last night for Buffalo, where he will attend the minor league meeting, after which he will meet with other National League magnates and managers, said he would do everything in his power while at the major league session to prevent the consummation of what he considered potentially one of the greatest crimes ever contemplated against baseball.

"Are there any great problems to be solved at the meeting?" Rickey was asked.

"Yes, indeed," the Cardinal manager replied. "There is the contemplated sale of Heine Groh to the Giants. That would be one of the worst crimes ever committed against baseball. It would tend to make a one-man race out of the National League season, and I will do all in my power while in New York to prevent the deal from being consummated."

Rickey said the recent reported offer by the Cincinnati club of $25,000 and several players for a minor league infielder had brought the subject of Groh and the New York trade pointedly to his attention.

An Earful During Series.

"While at the world's series," said Rickey, "the Cincinnati officials refused to admit that the Groh deal was made, but when I offered to wager Pat Moran that Groh would be in a New York uniform next season Moran refused to accept the bet. I had it from good sources, particularly New York, that the deal was virtually settled, only the minor details remaining to be arranged. Cincinnati is to get $150,000, Player Ryan thrown in Cunningham. That was the dope given to me by a New York club official.

"It is reported that the Cincinnati club has offered $25,000 and certain players for a minor league, ex-big league infielder. If Groh were to remain, Cincinnati would not need another third baseman. The natural inference is that New York money, via Cincinnati, will pay for the player if that deal is consummated.

"Everything points to the Groh deal being all arranged. I do not believe any club ought to sell a player that it needs and can use. Does any one believe that Caveney of San Francisco, for example, is as valuable to Cincinnati as Groh? Not by $125,000. It is unfair to the local public and fans to give up any player for cash when there is no one as good or better to take his place and puts the game of baseball squarely on the altar of dollars. If it be said that each organization knows best how to build its own club, I reply that to sell Heine Groh for cash isn't building up a ball club and New York is getting strength it hasn't earned.

Deal Blocked Once.

"Judge Landis has already stopped the deal once. Groh would have been a Giant last year if the Judge had not ordered him to play with the Reds during 1921. Did Groh sulk? No, he had a better year this season and was more valuable to his club than he was in 1920.

"Apparently there is not as much excuse for Cincinnati to sell Groh to New York this year as there was last year. The Cincinnati club certainly does not need money. It is obviously sop thrown to the Cincinnati public to get $150,000 for Groh and pay one-sixth of that amount for a player to take his place. They have not nearly as much reason for selling Groh as the Cardinals might have had to sell Hornsby.

"When New York offered $250,000 for Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinal club needed money. It was in debt. But all over the circuit there was a cry that it would be a great blow to baseball if Hornsby were sold to New York. The Cardinals did not sell; we said all along that Hornsby was not for sale, and subsequent developments proved the soundness of our business judgment and it would have been blamed poor sportsmanship to sell him, too.

Reds Are Flag Contender.

"I regard the Cincinnati club as a pennant contender. Pat Moran told me in New York he believed he had the best club in the league at the close of the season. One of his several reasons is that the Cincinnati club is the only one to beat the Cardinals in the year's series.

"If Groh leaves, of course, it is possible to get even a better man in his place, but it is not probable, and dollars piled as high as the Cincinnati flag pole won't score any runs for the Reds. Cincinnati may win the pennant without Groh; but New York won't finish last with him.

"The Cardinals will go out and play 154 games, just the same if McGraw gets Groh or not, and we will fight all the way, but it would help the race in the National League if the Groh deal does not go through."

MINOR LEAGUES OPEN MEETING TOMORROW

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Owners, managers and players are gathering here for the twenty-first annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. The opening session will be held tomorrow, but the Board of Arbitration will meet today to straighten out some of the more difficult tangles resulting from the season's clashes among the minors.

"Economy will be the watchword for next season, and we are going to be prepared for it at this week's session," he said. "The cost of running some of the big teams is getting too high and it will be to the best interests of the game to retrench."

Judge K. M. Landis, supreme arbitrator in baseball, is expected early in the week.

Hornsby Batted for .397 Average In 1921, Official Figures Show

National League Had 58 Hitters at .300 or Better Last Season —Lavan With .259 Was Only Cardinal Regular Out of Select Circle—Knot-Holers Topped Teams.

Official averages of the National League, released today, show that Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinal slugger, failed in his effort to clout .400 for the campaign. Hornsby's official mark is .397, 20 points better than the figure owned by his closest rival. Hornsby's mark is the highest since 1899, when Ed Delahanty hit .408. The figure for the Cardinal slugger is 27 points better than his 1920 mark.

The averages for the campaign show that there were 58 National League hitters in the select circle. Of this number six were pitchers. It is easily the longest string of .300 hitters ever owned by the N. L. The Cardinals alone had 10 select circle batters. Johnny Lavan, with .259, was the only regular out of the .300 class.

Hornsby in addition to leading the league in hitting made the most hits, 235, led in two-base hits with 44 and tied for honors in triples with 18. He also was high in total bases with 378 and in runs scored with 131. Kelly of the Giants had 23 homers. Frisch topped the base stealers with 49, and Milton Stock the sacrifice hitters with 36.

EQUIPMENTS AND RUBBERS STRONG ON STOCK MARKET

Trade Moderately Active — Short Covering in Evidence — Government Bonds Show Advances, but Rails Heavy.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Trading in stock was moderately active today with strength in equipthe feature. Among these shares a number of gains of a point or two were recorded. Short covering was in evidence. Changes among the other industrials were relatively insignificant and rails were fractionally lower. Railroad bonds also showed heaviness, but Government war bonds were strong and the rest of the bond list was steady. Call money opened at 5 per cent and was lowered to 4½ during the fourth hour.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"A strong tone was apparent among the foreign exchanges. Business, however, was light and the advance in quotations was based on the dealings at London. Sterling rose a cent at $4.50¾, and French francs were up 13 points at 7.43 cents. German marks, however, sagged back 3 points to .043 of a cent. Nothing new or a definite character appeared in the German situation and the day's decline doubtless was but a repercussion from the major disturbance of last week. Exchange on the Scandinavian and other ex-neutral states in Europe was firm. Calls from London report continued strength in the investment markets, partly on the belief that easy money will continue on this side of the water.

"Scattered liquidation brought somewhat lower prices for cotton. January sold as low as 17.15 cents and after rallying 11 points was still off 18 points on the day. Traders are still awaiting the Census Bureau's ginning report, which is due on Dec. 8, and the Agricultural Department's annual estimate of the total yield, which is due on Dec. 12. Wheat meanwhile enjoyed a period of moderate strength despite snowfall in the Southwest over the week-end. Private reports were bullish. In addition, some quarters look on favorable Government crop report on Dec. 17, since the condition will be estimated in this report as of Dec. 1, as the moisture badly needed rain and snow had not fallen in the Southwest. In any event, May wheat advanced 1 cent to $1.17⅜ and then reacted to $1.16½. Export demand continued slight.

Index Number Changes.

"Dun's index of wholesale commodity prices shows a slight advance during November. This follows an advance during October. The circumstance raises the question of an apparent discrepancy between the behavior of Dun's index and that of the Bureau of Labor statistics, which is perhaps our best-weighted index, and whose October value showed a decline. Aside from a difference in the time interval covered by the two indices, the explanation lies in the weights given different groups of commodities. Four out of the seven Dun groups are given heavier weights, which rallied during October, while only two out of the nine Bureau of Labor groups cover such materials. Declines in house furnishing goods and building materials, which featured the last change in the bureau's index, are given comparatively little weight in the Dun figures. On the whole, however, it is clear that the products which now show price weakness are those which have lagged further behind the general decline, while the commodities which have fallen further show the greatest resistance."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Professional sentiment still is skeptical. There was no general forward movement in stocks. Nowadays it is the fashion for stocks to move by groups. But there were more of these group advances than on any day lately. First it was the equipment stocks, with American Locomotive going through par in anticipation of higher dividends. Then it was the shipping stocks discounting the rumored prospect of a ship subsidy. Later it was the motor and tire shares and the high priced tobaccos and then it was some of the oil stocks.

New high prices were reached in the United States war bonds, especially in the two Victory issues, which sold above par for the first time, and the first 4¼s of the fourth loan, which touched 98. The general run of bonds was strong again, but still lacked the upward push which was back of their market a week ago.

In the exchange market the chief incident was a further rally in French francs. This occurred while French Government bonds were likewise rallying, the 7½s getting up nearly 2 points from last week's low. Sterling went higher with French rates, but German marks were weak again. Their decline fitted in logically enough with the showing in the weekly German bank statement. Another and still greater increase has taken place in note circulation. This item is up 4,500,000,000 marks from a week ago and for the first time is well above the 100,000,000,000 level.

Railway shares which lost their place of leadership after the "good news" of Burlington's 20 per cent dividend was out of the way, were not taken up again today. They were affected toward the end of the afternoon by a selling movement in the St. Paul issues, in the course of which the common stock broke through its previous low of the year.

Realizing sales were encountered in increasing volume as the day went on and in the last hour prices came down all around from their early highs.

Almost of the industrial leaders there was a demand for stocks when at 102¾. Pennsylvania 6¼s on the they were offered off a half point to a point.

The Bond Market.

United States war bonds provided the chief feature of today's bond market. The two Victory issues, both the 3¾s and the 4¼s, crossed par for the first time in 1921, and there was particular strength also in the 4¼s which got above 98, a fresh top for the year. The foreign Governments were fairly steady, the main point of interest in this group being the French 7½s and 8s. The former touched 97, a rise of over a point from their last week's low of 93¼. The 8s today went above par again. United Kingdom 5½s of 1937 were strong and so were the Rio de Janeiro 8s and City of Copenhagen 5½s. City of Zurich 8s advanced a point. On the other hand, there was slight weakness in a few of the recent favorites, such as the Republic of Chile bonds.

The rest of the market held pretty well to the closing prices of last week with the exception of a few bonds which either went into new high ground or declined for special reasons. A number of the rails reached their best prices for the year including Burlington joint 4½s, up nearly a point, St. Paul refunding 4½s at 60¾, Erie convertible 4s series D at 44, Northern Pacific 6s, gaining a

GRAIN PRICES CLOSE DOWN IN CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Wheat averaged a little higher in price today during the early dealings. Buying on the part of houses with seaboard connections tended to encourage bulls, and so, too, did London dispatches reiterating that Japan of late had been a purchaser on a large scale. On the upturns, however, the Southwest appeared to be selling. Opening quotations, which ranged from ⅛c to ¼c higher, with December at $1.13⅛ to $1.13⅜ and May $1.17 to $1.17¾, were followed by a moderate setback and then a fresh advance.

Selling from Southwestern sources led subsequently to a sharp setback for the July delivery, and acted as a drag on old crop months. The close was heavy, ⅜c to 2¾c net lower, with December $1.12 and May $1.15⅛ to $1.15¾.

Corn had a downward inclination in the absence of any aggressive support. After opening ⅛c lower to a shade advance, May 54⅝c to 54¾c, the market sagged a little all around.

Cash houses were on the selling side. The close was weak, ⅞c to 1c net lower, with May at 54c.

Oats were governed more by wheat than by corn, starting ⅛c to ⅜c@⅝c up. May 38⅛c to 38⅜@38¾c, and then continued relatively firm.

Nail Cornell Panels to the joists or studding or over damaged plaster. Cornell Panels for a ceiling 16x12 ft. will cost approximately $5.50.

Finish with panel strips over the line where panel joins panel. Cornell Panels for four walls 8 ft. high of a room 10x12 ft. will cost approximately $13.50.

See How Easy to Build Cornell Interiors

The reason Cornell so far excels the ordinary wallboard is because it is made of pure wood fiber and is "Triple-Sized." This process gives it triple resistance to moisture, expansion, contraction, sound and change in temperature.

No other wallboard is like it. Lath and plaster or plaster board can't compare with it in cost, cleanliness or durability, or ease of application.

EDWARD LEA.

"Snow beating against the window pane; a shrill wind whistling through the trees; the noisy crunch of passing footsteps in the snow—warning all indoors that old Winter is on a rampage.

"A cold, snow-bound qutdoors; a warm, cozy home; a "junior engineer" with a Lionel Electric. Outside, the locals and limiteds slowly plowing their way, or stalled in drifts, yet the Lionel speeds on, over the straight stretches of track and around the curves. Responds to a lever and stops! Runs backward—then forward again!"

"Dull monotony changed to happy pastime! The cold, bleak night forgotten in the joys of indoor railroading! What live, red-blooded boy could fail to enjoy one of these

UNIFORM WAREHOUSE RECEIPT AS COLLATERAL DISCUSSED

The establishment of a uniform warehouse receipt to be used as collateral for loans will be effected by the American Warehousemen's Association, which today began its thirty-first meeting, together with conventions of the Central Warehousemen's Club, the Missouri Warehousemen's Association and the American Chain of Warehouses, at Hotel Statler. About 500 delegates are expected to attend the meeting which will continue through tomorrow and Wednesday.

The American Warehousemen's Association has been working for some time with the American Bankers' Association to formulate a met... to put such receipts into general use. One of the speakers at the meeting will be Thomas B. Patton, general counsel for the American Bankers' Association, who will explain the bankers' attitude toward the proposed receipt.

President W. W. Morse of the association said that no receipt emanating from any kind of warehouse should contain a single line to which a banker might object.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

L. P. R.—The negro population of St. Louis is 69,602.

O. Z.—Apply to the State Factory Inspector at Jefferson City, Mo.

J. I. G.—Apply to the Automobile License Department at the city hall.

BONDS.—Inquire among the brokerage offices about the code of which you ask.

GRAMMAR.—The sentence, "Be ready to do the work profitably and systematically," is correct.

C. A. W.—Consult the Public Library for the information wanted as it is too extensive for our space.

W. B. S.—A letter addressed to Congressman L. C. Dyer, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., will reach him.

SUBSCRIBER.—We have never heard of any "counting" record being established and have no information on the subject.

READER.—If the whole amount is $20.62 and 8 per cent for tax was included then the tax is $1.65 and the price alone is $18.97.

HENRY K.—There are approximately 22,000 square feet to a circle 150 feet in diameter, but there is no accurate method of squaring a circle.

WEALTH.—The monetary stocks of gold of the principal countries of the world were estimated at $8,233,185,000 at the end of 1919, the silver stocks at about $1,877,691,000.

A PAL.—Sheik is pronounced to rhyme with "meek." He is the head of the family, village, tribe or religious organization in the Mohammedan and especially Arabian countries.

R. Mc.—The duties of the editor in chief of a school paper are to select the subjects and material for publication, to choose the workers for their rspective duties and to supervise the copy, proofs and makeup of the paper.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A DISTRESSED RENTER.—Notice of an increase of rent, received on Nov. 10, will only apply to the month beginning Dec. 3.

BELLEVILLE, ILLINOIS. — You can sue the company for the amount they contracted to pay, or for the fair value of your services, if there was no contract.

LESTER.—You need pay an inheritance tax only on the share which you inherited, not on the shares you acquired by purchase. If you derive an income from the land you pay an income tax on that.

DELMAR J.—If your wife did not hear from you for more than seven years, a presumption of your death was created. Now you know that she and children are alive. You will have to support her and the children. To remarry it will be necessary to obtain a divorce.

A WORRIED SWEETHEART.—A girl of 18 who cannot be married in St. Louis, may go to Illinois, and be legally married. The ruling of the Attorney-General of Illinois. This marriage would be considered legal in Missouri, and could not be annulled by her parents.

W. McG.—No limit is placed upon the per cent of alcohol used in preparing medicines. The product, however, must be a medicine, not a beverage, and then a permit must be secured from the State Prohibition Director at Kansas City.

F. N. R.—A landlady has no right to interfere in disputes between man and wife, if they are quietly conducted. If your wife's conduct justifies a divorce you can obtain one, without alimony, but you will be compelled to support your child.

SONNY.—If there was a commonlaw marriage consummated before March 31, 1924, it is valid and a divorce will be necessary. Common-law marriages in Missouri were abolished on that date. They are lawful still in some of the states.

CHICAGO.—It would not be against the law to operate a post card exchange club or paper, but it would be unwise to do so, even though you were not the publisher. It would be necessary to obtain a license to operate a mail order business or book selling scheme.

S. M.—When your husband has been away from you for seven successive years, without being known to be alive, you can marry again without committing bigamy. However, we would suggest that it would be much safer to obtain a divorce, to avert any trouble that may develop later.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

G. B.—The eye is too delicate an organ to attempt self-treatment. Consult an oculist.

J. R.—There are no regular training schools for male nurses, but all hospitals employ male "details" or "orderlies," in which service a man should become quite a very proficient practical nurse.

DOUBTFUL.—We could hardly be expected to tell you which physician has made the proper diagnosis in your case, as such a decision is based upon the sounds heard in examination of the heart. If there is valvular disease, there is very little trouble in establishing it. We do not place much faith in the diagnosis made in connection with the X-ray in such cases.

HARD LUCK.—A varicocele is an enlargement of the veins of the scrotum (or bag). Unless quite large it is not a cause for much, if any, discomfort, never fever. You can, if you are a citizen, have the condition operated upon at the city hospital free of charge. If you are not a citizen, and unemployed, you can no doubt have it done at one of the clinics.

MARY.—The following directions will help increase the breast milk supply for the mother. The first meal in the morning should be taken at night. If possible the mother should be entirely relieved of the child's care at that time, feeding if necessary being given by bottle. She should have a certain amount of fresh air daily, driving or walking. The most powerful stimulant for secretion of milk is massage. This should be done gently and with great care as to absolute cleanliness—a mild antiseptic ointment may be used with the massage. Massage two or three times a day for 15 minutes. A good diet for the mother with a large allowance of milk and meat, especially beef, should not cause indigestion, much, if any, discomfort, never fever. You can, if you are a citizen, have the condition operated upon at the city hospital free of charge. If you are not a citizen, and unemployed, you can no doubt have it done at one of the clinics.

AN URGENT MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNORS OF 41 STATES

To Twenty Million School Children

OF AMERICA

THOMAS E. KILBY, Governor of Alabama.
School and college students everywhere should study the proceedings of the pending conference for the Limitation of Armaments. I can conceive of no way by which those who are to be our future citizens can be trained more effectively for the political and economic development of our Country and of the world.

THOMAS E. CAMPBELL, Governor of Arizona.
Regardless of its outcome, the Armament Conference is of such tremendous importance to the future welfare of the young people of America that they should take advantage of every possible opportunity to follow the proceedings in detail.

THOMAS C. McRAE, Governor of Arkansas.
Every school child and college student in the United States should be required to study closely the proceedings of this great Conference. They should know the significance of it all. Teachers and school and college officials will co-operate to this end, I believe.

WILLIAM D. STEPHENS, Governor of California.
Never before in the history of the world has a limited group of men been given the opportunity to relieve a war-weary world of the awful burdens of destructive warfare. Never before has it been possible to relieve the mothers, the children and the toilers of the world of the heartaches, the heartbreaks, the want and misery and slighted education, the almost unbearable taxes and other economic sacrifices brought on by war. May we not pray that God will guide aright all those who participate in the proceedings of the great Disarmament Congress now in session in Washington. In my judgment it will be good for the future of the republic if all school children give earnest study to the proceedings.

OLIVER H. SHOUP, Governor of Colorado.
We can conceive no better way to train the citizens of tomorrow for the discharge of their most important duties than by encouraging their study of the proceedings in Washington at the great Conference.

EVERETT J. LAKE, Governor of Connecticut.
If it can be impressed upon all our school children to watch intently and to study by all means at hand the proceedings now taking place at the Armament Conference at Washington, I feel sure that in the years to come, their influence will be moulded into a public opinion which will insist upon an amicable adjustment without force of arms of all differences, and that this public opinion will also make such amicable adjustment effective to prevent further wars among civilized nations.

CARY A. HARDEE, Governor of Florida.
It is well that the twenty million school children of America should study the proceedings of the Washington Conference. It is perhaps a mountain peak in the political and economic history of the modern world.

THOMAS W. HARDWICK, Governor of Georgia.
I believe that a study of this question by the college students and school children of the country is most important.

D. W. DAVIS, Governor of Idaho.
There is an astonishing lack of sound information among our citizens of the political and economic history of the world. Should the true situation be spread before the boys and girls today there would dawn a better tomorrow, because the dominating characteristic of the average citizen is his desire for betterment.

LEN SMALL, Governor of Illinois.
Warring between nations must cease. Humanity demands it; economics demand it. I can see no better way to bring about this ultimate end, should we not immediately succeed, than to educate the twenty million American school children to the horrors of war and the necessities of peace through close study of the proceedings of the present Disarmament Conference.

WARREN T. McCRAY, Governor of Indiana.
There has never been a time in the World's history when the deliberations and decrees of a selected group of international representatives meant more to the future of civilization than the decisions resulting from the Armament Conference now in session at Washington. Every suggestion or movement of the Conference should be closely studied by the public school children of our land, thus inculcating in their minds the idea that the apostles of peace are no less deserving of the eternal gratitude of a liberty-loving nation than are the heroes of war.

N. E. KENDALL, Governor of Iowa.
I unreservedly approve the campaign to induce the school children of the country to study its proceedings from day to day. Nothing, in my opinion, will contribute so much to the preservaton of permanent peace as the inculcation in the hearts of the young of a profound abhorrence of war.

HENRY J. ALLEN, Governor of Kansas.
I know of nothing more timely than the study in the schools of the present proceedings of the Arms Conference. Its fundamental educational value alone would justify it. It marks an important epoch in history, and will have a tremendous effect upon the thought and feeling of the prseent and the future.

EDWIN P. MORROW, Governor of Kentucky.
The youth of America, its boys and girls, should watch with the keenest interest and the fullest understanding the ever-shifting scene of the Disarmament Conference to the end that they may forever say, "I beheld the progress of the event which took fear and distrust of the hearts of nations and brought confidence in each other to nations and a newer sense of brotherhood to the peoples of the earth."

JOHN M. PARKER, Governor of Louisiana.
The nation, and especially coming men and women, as represented by our school children, should carefully study this Conference.

PERCIVAL P. BAXTER, Governor of Maine.
As Governor of Maine and head of the School Department, I have urged both superintendents and teachers to have their classes study and follow the proceedings of the Disarmament Conference. I consider this Conference the greatest event of history and believe that the rising generation should become conversant with the problems of the Conference and with the discussion that takes place there. A careful study of the Conference proceedings will teach world history, geography, economics and politics, and will give our students a wide range of information. The importance of such a program cannot be overstated.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL CHILDREN OF TO-DAY must be the preservers of World Peace tomorrow.

The Presidents and Cabinet Members, the Senators and Congressmen, the Preachers and Editors, and all the great leaders of thought and action who will control the destinies of America and of the world when "tomorrow" dawns are studying at this very moment in the schoolrooms of the Nation.

They are preparing—we who plan their studies, we who teach them are preparing them—for the great tasks we must soon turn over to them. Their minds and hearts must be filled with the great lessons from the living present.

The greatest moment of their lives, for learning, is THIS MOMENT. The greatest opportunity that ever came or ever can come to them for learning the political and economic history of the world, has come to them now in the great Conference of Nations which is meeting in Washington.

The Literary Digest has received telegrams from the Governors of forty-one of the forty-eight States of the United States calling upon the teachers and school children of America to give earnest study day by day to the proceedings, from beginning to end, of the great Disarmament Conference, which the Governor of Florida characterizes as "the mountain peak in the political and economic history of the modern world." These telegrams are here printed as an urgent message to the schools of the Nation.

J. A. O. PREUS, Governor of Minnesota.
The Conference on Limitation of Armaments is the most important gathering in many decades and every student who desires a complete knowledge of history must read and watch its proceedings.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE, Governor of Maryland.
I heartily urge the school children of America to study the proceedings of the Disarmament Conference as they develop from day to day. No such opportunity for learning the political and economic history of the world, the hopes and ambitions of its peoples, has ever been presented. It is a rare privilege that is afforded us. There can be no greater or broader educational advantage than to study intently the proceedings of the Conference.

CHANNING H. COX, Governor of Massachusetts.
In the Armament Conference the political and economic history of the modern world is to be studied. I can conceive of no better way to train the citizens of tomorrow for the discharge of their most important duties than by encouraging their study of the proceedings of the great Conference.

ALEX. J. GROESBECK, Governor of Michigan.
Our boys and girls should closely follow the proceedings at Washington and thus take advantage of a wonderful opportunity to study history in its making.

ARTHUR M. HYDE, Governor of Missouri.
The history of the Washington Conference should be studied from both the political and the economic side by the school children of America. There can be no better way to train citizenship than by the study of the history and the present conditions, political, economic and social, of the other nations of the world. The study of the proceedings of the Conference will be of vast educational value to the school children of America and to the citizenship of the future.

JOSEPH M. DIXON, Governor of Montana.
The Disarmament Conference marks a milestone in world history. The public schools and colleges of the country can perform no greater service to the nation than that of giving courses, during the sitting of the Washington Conference, to their students regarding the great questions involved. If we can fully impress upon the minds of these young people the tremendous danger involved and the impelling necessity for World Disarmament, the possibilities of future war will be greatly reduced.

SAMUEL R. McKELVIE, Governor of Nebraska.
School and college students should keep carefully informed of the work of the Disarmament Conference. The facts that will be deduced out of the discussion there are of tremendous importance to our national life. A knowledge of national conditions is a prime requisite of good citizenship, and of almost equal importance is a knowledge of international affairs.

EMMET D. BOYLE, Governor of Nevada.
I heartily approve your suggestion that the school children study contemporary history in the making at the Arms Conference. The movement is an educative one and should extend to the children upon whose intelligence and sense of justice the future of the nation rests.

MERRITT C. MECHEM, Governor of New Mexico.
I think it vitally important to instruct the youth of the country relative to the great historical event now transpiring at the Washington Disarmament Conference. Our children should be helped to understand thoroughly what is being done to prevent a recurrence of the horrible world tragedy we are now emerging from.

NATHAN L. MILLER, Governor of New York.
I strongly recommend to the teachers and the boys and girls of New York the earnest study of the proceedings of the Disarmament Conference which already gives such promise of a new era. The rising generation should be taught the lessons of this Conference and be made to understand the high aims and unselfish purpose of America.

EDWARD I. EDWARDS, Governor of New Jersey.
Next to the movement which resulted in the gathering of representatives of world powers at Washington to discuss and agree upon a Limitation of Armament, the most powerful aid to the ultimate accomplishment of lasting peace among men is your earnest plea that our twenty million American school children join with their elders in studying closely the proceedings of the Armament Conference that they may be thoroughly imbued with the anti-war feeling. That sentiment will, I trust, through the medium of our most potential educator, the Press, be heard around the world and do more than any other human agency to supplant fear and suspicion with trust and confidence, thus removing the primary cause of war and begetting an era of good will.

R. A. NESTOS, Governor of North Dakota.
Every student should secure as full and accurate knowledge as possible of the work of the Conference. This will help as scarcely anything else could to give meaning to the events of the coming decades, imbue the rising generations with the spirit of this Conference, and the world's progress must follow the paths of peace.

J. B. A. ROBERTSON, Governor of Oklahoma.
The Limitation of Armaments Conference in Washington will accomplish through its deliberations the most thorough illuminating and practical survey of the past development and future progress of our civilization that can ever be achieved. The proceedings of the Conference should be read and reviewed as a part of the daily course in all our schools, colleges and universities in order that the rising generation may be fully educated upon the cost and folly of war.

BEN W. OLCOTT, Governor of Oregon.
If success is achieved at Disarmament Conference, as it now appears it shall be, History will hold no record of achievement for world good equal to it. Consequently History may hold nothing more vital for the study of our youths and all citizens than the progressive steps of this gathering.

WILLIAM C. SPROUL, Governor of Pennsylvania.
I am calling upon the fifty thousand public school teachers in Pennsylvania to lead their students into the study of the proceedings of the great Conference at Washington in the belief that they will thus see in the making historical events which may lead to results comparable only to the promised millennium of peace and good will.

EMERY J. SAN SOUCI, Governor of Rhode Island.
The President should receive the support of every American in his efforts to secure permanent peace to the world. The school children especially should study the proceedings of the Conference so that the coming generation may be well fitted to aid in the cause of permanent peace.

ROBERT A. COOPER, Governor of South Carolina.
Study of the proceedings of the Disarmament Conference will have a tendency to enlighten the public concerning international affairs. Enlightenment, together with a sense of justice, is essential for the proper solution of questions arising between nations. Many stupid blunders and costly wars have resulted because the general public was not informed. The proceedings of the Conference should be studied in all schools.

W. H. McMASTER, Governor of South Dakota.
May the school children of America study every phase, act and utterance of the Disarmament Conference. Every detail and circumstance of the Conference should be a vital part of the daily study and thought of the twenty million school children of America.

ALFRED A. TAYLOR, Governor of Tennessee.
There can be no better way to train the citizens of tomorrow for the discharge of their most important duties than by encouraging them to study the proceedings of the great Conference now in session at Washington. That Conference will deal with the political and economic history of the whole world, and its study and a discussion of these subjects will afford a source of enlightenment on matters of vital concern and a fund of knowledge of inestimable value to the rising generation of boys and girls when they are at the helm.

PAT M. NEFF, Governor of Texas.
The history that is now being made by the Disarmament Conference at Washington will be frequently referred to by writers, speakers and thinkers for generations to come. It constitutes an epoch-making milepost that ineffacably marks the march of man. The students of today who are to be the men and women of tomorrow should have as a part of their daily curriculum the detailed proceedings of this world-wide Conference, as it seeks to turn the tide of civilization away from the war-wrecked shores of the past.

CHARLES R. MABEY, Governor of Utah.
The Disarmament Conference constitutes a landmark in human progress the significance of which cannot yet be conceived. By all means let us study earnestly its deliberations that understanding among all peoples may be the result. It is essential to posterity that the youth of the nation comprehend the full meaning and purposes of the gathering. With such a basis of familiarity they will best be prepared to perpetuate and bring to complete materialization the aims and ideas now being proposed.

LOUIS F. HART, Governor of Washington.
"There is much truth in the argument that human nature will have to undergo a change before war can be eliminated. . . . A beginning has been made—a bold, fearless step, such as an unselfish nation like the United States might be expected to take, but after all its greatest value is educational—the problem remains for future generations. By all means let the children of the land study closely the Disarmament Conference.

E. F. MORGAN, Governor of West Virginia.
The International Conference on Limitation of Armament, with political and economic discussions concerning Far East problems, gives to American students unparalleled opportunities to study and acquaint themselves with world problems an understanding of which will be of great service to their Nation in the coming years.

JOHN J. BLAINE, Governor of Wisconsin.
The study of the news of the Armament Conference in connection with the political and economic history of the world and the causes of war will give us enlightened future generations in aid of World Peace.

ROBERT D. CAREY, Governor of Wyoming.
The history of the Disarmament Conference should be impressed upon the minds of the school children of America. The United States leads in a movement that promises more for the peace of the world than any gathering of statesmen since the dawn of history. Through our Educational Department I have requested that the schools of Wyoming shall study every phase of the Conference, from its inception to final adjournment. With the minds of the students of the Nation focused upon the proceedings of the Conference, the chief actors will feel a keener incentive to make their conclusions conform to the dominant will of the peoples of the earth.

TO the FATHERS and MOTHERS of AMERICA

This message comes to you with the challenge of a great opportunity for your boys and girls. It presses upon you a personal responsibility to see that they do not lose the benefits of this wonderful opportunity to fit themselves in the broadest way for their future citizenship. Take the matter up personally with their teachers and with the principals of their schools. Urge it through your Parents' Associations. The Literary Digest is helping all it can, not only by printing this Message of the Governors in hundreds of the leading dailies of the country from Maine to California, but also by publishing in its own pages every week a careful review and explanation of the Proceedings of the Arms Conference, together with opinions regarding it from all over the world. The Governor of Montana was moved to telegraph, a few days ago, that "the last number of The Literary Digest was a veritable treasure-house of information regarding the scope and possibilities of this historic International Conference." Five hundred thousand school children already are studying The Literary Digest in their classrooms, and fullest co-operation is provided to enable all others to enjoy the same benefit.

MAXIMS —OF A— Modern Maid

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

LOVE is a candle which burns highest in the wind of public disapproval—and often low and feebly in the air of home.

Many a man thinks his domestic partner should be a sparring partner—paid to stand up and take whatever he has to offer in the way of criticism and putting up just enough of a defense to keep him in good fighting trim.

Those ultra-affectionate notes women send to each other mean almost as much as the shoulder-slapping and the "dear-old-boy" business of men.

One of the reasons why a man likes to have his wife hold his overcoat, or put studs and cuff links in his shirt is that he is thus enabled surlily to repulse these small services whenever he has a grouch.

"A woman," complains a man, "takes every criticism of her sex as a personal affront." And then, when she ventures the opinion that men, as a whole, are selfish, or conceited, or fat—he fairly chatters with rage!

In love-making, as in painting, an admirable technique will hide from the average eye the absence of sincerity.

As a safety first measure, all husbands who confide their troubles to "a woman who understands" should pick one with a bobbed coiffure. Then they won't go home wearing that long, golden hair on the coat sleeve.

CREAM OF CORN SOUP

ALLOW one-half cup of corn, cut from the cob, heated up in a little milk, for each cup of soup made. Allow also, for each cup of soup, as much salt pork, cut in dice, as will yield one tablespoon of fat when sauteed or fried. Some onion may be gently sweated in this fat if this seasoning is desired. Allow one tablespoon of flour for each tablespoon of fat and one cup of milk. Stir and cook until thick, then add the hot corn and seasonings, and cook until well blended. Serve with or without straining. Garnish with a tablespoon of whipped cream lightly salted. A bit of paprika may be shaken over it to finish the picture. If the bread is crisp rolls, this is the time in the meal to eat it—with the soup.

FIG NUT SANDWICHES

CHOP one-fourth pound of figs very fine, add one-fourth cup water and cook to a smooth paste; add also one-third cup almonds (blanched, chopped very fine and pounded to a paste with a little rose water, also the juice of half a lemon). When cold, spread mixture on lady fingers or small cakes, white or yellow, press another over mixture and serve. Bread may also be used.

How to Be Happy Though Married

By WILLIAM M. McMAHON

THE CURSE OF JEALOUSY.

GROUNDLESS and unreasoning jealousy is the producer of misery to both husband and wife. It is a question who suffers the more, the one who is jealous, or the other, who is the object of it. It is a 50-50 partnership in a hell on earth.

Where unjustified jealousy flourishes in full flower, it may be only a question of time until it will be justified.

Men and women of genius and of intellect, as well as the ignorant, yield to this misery-making monster. I remember going to the theater with a president of a bank and his wife, a splendid couple who had lived together for a quarter of a century. The show was a musical comedy, and Samuel seemed to enjoy it, especially the chorus girls. If Samuel looked too intently his wife would give him a violent nudge and say:

On the way out of the theater and for a distance of a block or two she certainly waxed eloquent.

"You're a silly old fool, and you humiliated me all the evening, smirking and giggling at those painted hussies on the stage. This is the last time you will ever go to that kind of a theater, and the last chance you'll get to disgrace me in public."

Poor Samuel winced under this tirade, although he tried to laugh it off. I felt sorry for both of them.

On another occasion I was calling on a friend of mine, a writer, and while he sat abstractedly thumbing the pages of an illustrated magazine his wife bounced into the room, snatched the magazine from his hands and flung it into the fire, after which she burst into a paroxysm of tears and rage, all because he looked at the pictures of women.

Another wife I know is jealous of men. Her husband does not dare to invite a friend to his home for fear his wife will make a scene. In consequence they live like hermits, and have no friends and no diversion except the morose and sulking society of each other. The other day this husband confided to me that he "had a girl," a beautiful lady who "understood" him.

"I'm getting even," he explained. "Might as well have the game as the name, you know."

This unreasoning jealousy is the cause of many sly resolutions of wives and husbands to "have the game as well as the name."

An odd case is related by a lawyer acquaintance. He had a client who was cursed with this jealous mania. This husband was sane in all other respects, but insanely jealous of his wife. The latter was a model of propriety, but because she was wrongly accused all the time and browbeaten by her husband in his jealous fits, she acted like a hunted rabbit, afraid almost to breathe when a third party was near.

This husband surrounded his home by detectives. His wife was spied on when she went to market. Peeking eyes watched her as she bargained with the grocer and the iceman. Peddlers and even beggars were cross-examined as they walked from her door, while the neighbors giggled in great glee.

This couple had one child, a boy, about three years old. This child was the one thing that enabled the mother to bear up under her misery.

One day this husband came tearing into the office of his attorney.

"I want divorce proceedings to be started at once." He was pale and trembling.

"On what grounds," asked the lawyer, "do you expect to get this divorce?"

"The child," wailed the man, "is not mine. The whole truth came to me in a vision. I see it all. My best friend!" He was pacing the floor.

Now this lawyer knew the situation, and was wise in his day and generation. He was the boss of the town and its institutions. He excused himself, went into the next room and telephoned to the insane asylum, of which he happened to be a trustee. He talked with the superintendent, then returned and said to his crazy client, "In about 15 minutes we will see what can be done."

In a short time an automobile came up with some muscular attendants in it. These attendants presented themselves in the private office.

"Take this man to the asylum," was all the lawyer said. The frantic husband was grabbed and carried away.

The lawyer wrote to the wife and told her to cheer up. "Such jealousy as is shown by your husband," he wrote, "cannot be cured by talk. He needs to be awakened. I intend to keep him out there for about six weeks, and in that time he will improve and you will have a rest."

Of course, the wife came and mildly pleaded for mercy, but she showed more courage than for many a year. In six weeks the husband was freed and went home "with some sense pried into his brain," as the lawyer put it.

Unreasoning jealousy is a species of insanity.

The courts have held that conduct of either a husband or wife that justly entitles the other to be jealous, may be cruel and inhuman treatment. The threat of physical violence alone does not constitute cruel and inhuman treatment. Conduct which causes great mental suffering may be cruel and inhuman. In one case the court says:

"Cruel and inhuman treatment does not necessarily imply such treatment as places a wife in physical fear of the husband. The conduct of the husband may produce such a mental agony in the wife as to be even more cruel and inhuman than if mere physical pain had been inflicted, and where the conduct of a husband toward the wife is of this character, it is certainly cruel and inhuman and justifies the court in freeing her from the necessity of submission to such treatment."

Also in another case the Judge said:

"The evidence shows that the wife abused the husband, continually calling him slurring, improper and indecent names, frequently accompanied with profanity, that she told him she loved another man whom she named, and regretted that she had not married him.

"This wife was much in the company of the man she said she loved and whom she wished she had married, and received his attentions. She also permitted him to caress her and generally deported herself in such a way that, when knowledge of it came to the husband, it could not but cause him great distress of mind."

Such conduct, persisted in as it was by the wife, constitutes, in my judgment, cruel and inhuman treatment, rendering a continuance of the marital relations improper and impossible.

This sort of carrying on certainly would be admitted anywhere to be cruel, even in those quarters where the mere idea of divorce for any reason whatever would not be tolerated.

All hands concede that a couple need not be too much married in public so that they hang about each other all the time to the exclusion of everyone else, yet there can easily be too much freedom of conduct. A man can be too liberal with his wife, and thus cheapen her in the estimation of their friends and in her own estimation, and likewise a wife can belittle her husband. Everyone hates to be "made a monkey of." And if that sort of thing is not "cruel and inhuman treatment," what is? And you don't want to be cruel, do you?

Making Her Look Her Best

By DORIS DOSCHER.

OF all portions of the face the part that needs the most careful attention and the most persistent massage is at the corner of the eye, where time first lays a heavy hand and writes her autographs in little disfiguring lines that are known as crow's feet. It is only by daily persistent application of a massage treatment or by a surgical operation that these wrinkles can be removed. I want to warn you against the strain put on the eyes by improper lighting or exposure to the sun's rays or the neglect of being fitted with proper glasses, as all of these cause the skin around the eye to wrinkle.

You will notice by the position of the hands in the illustration that they are ready for direct working on these wrinkles. Not only the pressure of the massage but the increased circulation is what makes this movement so beneficial. To facilitate the movement of the fingers over the surface of the face as well as to feed the tissues that lie directly beneath the surface I would recommend that you make up for yourself a good massage cream by using the following directions:

Oil of sweet almonds	45 grams
Spermaceti	20 grams
White wax	2 grams
Essence of lemon	1 gram
Ac. Salicylic	0.25 gram

This is a very good massage cream when you are working on the wrinkles. If you do not care for the trouble of making up this cream for yourself, there are several very excellent brands on the market for this purpose, but whatever materials you use, the face must be wiped free of it after the massage is over. It should be followed by a tonic lotion for the pale and dry skin, an astringent for wrinkles, and then a cream or salve should be applied.

According to the object of the massage, it should follow the direction of the blood vessels where there is absence of secretion as in dry skins. The movement of the fingers should follow the folds of the skin and the direction of the muscles where wrinkles are to be obliterated. Be sure to start the massage from the nose, working toward the temples.

Like the first gray hair, the appearance of crow's feet always gives you a feeling of coming age, so the little time you spend on the daily massage will not only improve the appearance of your face but give to it a lasting youthfulness. But do not think that this result can be obtained by simply massaging away crow's feet around the eyes. It requires not only the strictest attention to the laws of hygiene but time spent in the open air and exercises that stimulate the circulation, so that the general color of the complexion, the texture of the skin as well as the ironing out of the wrinkles can all contribute to the making of a beautiful face.

PRESSED VEAL

HAVE the butcher crack a knuckle of veal and cook in the fireless cooker with a slice of onion, two sprigs of parsley and salt and paprika to taste. When the meat will slip from the bones, chop finely and pack in a mold with sliced, hard boiled eggs, capers, bits of parsley and sliced stuffed olives or sweet pickles. Cook down the liquor with the bones to half a cupful, add a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and pour slowly over the meat. Let stand until cold, place a weight on top and chill on the ice. Serve, cut in slices with potato salad.

Junior League Officers Comment on Elinor Gly

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

MRS JOHN P. BOOGHER

SINCE it is "woman in her hour of ease" who is the particular object of Elinor Glyn's scorn—she doesn't admit the girl she describes as typical ever has a seriously occupied moment—since it is at the so-called butterfly type her diatribes are directed, who are in better position to take up the challenge than the young women of the Junior League?

The members of this organization are all girls or young matrons of the leisure class. Its ranks are recruited from those groups who figure most prominently in the society news. Most of the members have made their formal debuts with all that implies of deliberate pleasure seeking.

There can be no doubt the Glyn allegations include, if they are not intended specifically to apply to the type of girls who go into the Junior League.

Accordingly the catalog of vices ascribed to the American girl by our critic from overseas, was laid before Mrs. John P. Boogher, 6345 Washington boulevard, president of the organization. As luck would have it, I seemed to have run in upon a conference between the president of the league and the vice president, Miss Mary Plant. Miss Plant will be remembered as one of the special maids to the V. P. Queen of last year.

For a little while they were so enthusiastic and eager to tell of the flourishing state of all the activities of the league that it was difficult to arouse in them a proper state either of resentment or chagrin at the charges against them as representatives of their type. They are getting ready for a big Christmas sale at their Barnes Hospital work shop. The place looks like Santa Claus' headquarters and when one or more league members are gathered together they can't keep off the subject.

Since a simple recital of the activities being carried on by this group of girls goes a long way toward answering the Glyn assertions with regard to "amusements to kill time," and "the mad search after new sensations," I let them tell of these avocations, shall we say? since they pretend to no vocation.

The workshop at Barnes which was started several years ago with funds supplied by the league was the pioneer experiment in occupational therapy in this part of the country and has proved so successful it is being duplicated by other agencies in many other institutions. The league pays a supervisor, but the large corp of assistants is supplied from the league membership, volunteers devoting certain days of the week to the work. A public school lunchroom at which the league members act as waitresses to children in one of the poorest districts is another enterprise. Neighborhood House and other missions draw upon the league for teachers of classes; the municipal nurses rely upon them to assist at the baby clinics. A committee of the league interests itself in blind women. Another committee takes flowers to the hospitals every day. A committee mobilizes motor cars to transport sick persons to the clinics and take wounded soldiers on outings. Many of the girls have studied nursing and have volunteered their services in epidemics. Besides these permanently organized activities, every year the league takes part in or conducts big money-raising affairs for charity. The annual amateur revue, "The Follies," is not their least exacting task, since it is conducted and produced in a manner mighty near professional. The debutantes of the season are called upon to fill the cast and it is a severe apprenticeship they serve, any one of them will tell you.

Having with this record of service and time and thoughts for the less fortunate, automatically, as it were, disposed of our foreign critic's assertion that "nothing seems sacred to them; nothing satisfies them. They are like vampires sucking blood"—the young women just as cheerfully took up the other charges by which Elinor Glyn attempts to prove that morality among American girls is at a low level.

"'Gives her caresses lightly to one after another,'" read Miss Plant from the paragraphs quoted from the Glyn articles. "I do not think the girls today are as likely to kiss or as likely to be kissed as girls were in the mushy, sentimental Victorian age," commented Miss Plant. "Anyway, they are not so surreptitious about it. It isn't so dangerous. It doesn't mean anything."

"'Lipstick, eyebrow pencils and rouge,'" quoted Miss Plant again from the clipping. "Well, what of it?" she commented. "What has painting your face got to do with morality?"

"Why the Chinese women paint. And the women in the harems paint, and no man sees them except their husbands. Surely one doesn't make up for one's husband," she added, laughing.

"In my opinion women use powder and rouge and eyebrow pencils because they want to make themselves look as well as they can and it is only right and decent that we should not go about looking any more slovenly and bedraggled and faded and worn than we have to."

"And so many girls do not paint," interjected Mrs. Boogher. "I mean the girls who go in for athletics. And there are so many more of these now than ever before."

"'Cigarettes,'" quoted Miss Plant again. "And what have cigarettes to do with morality?" she inquired.

"Possibly because cigarette smoking among women in this country started in the sub-stratum of society, rather than in the upper circles, that it is associated with immorality," I suggested.

"Well, an English woman should not associate cigarette smoking with immorality, since it started in the upper classes with them," was the response. "I can see how cigarette smoking may be a question of health, but not of morals," said Miss Plant. "And yet I imagine a cigarette is a great relief physically to some women, even as it is claimed to be by the men."

"They don't do that because they don't wear any," ejaculated Mrs. Boogher. "They used to scold because girls wore their clothes too tight. Now they scold because they don't wear them tight. Well I don't think the modern young woman ever will go back to the old ways of cramming the body. They can't live in this generation their chest and waist expansion won't let them.

"Nor to tight collars," sounded Miss Plant.

"Think of the way they used to sweep up the streets with their skirts," observed Mrs. Boogher with a shudder.

"Women never dressed so sensibly as they do now," she added.

"Why the sport suit has become almost a uniform for street wear now. I believe we are tending more and more toward a sensible uniformity of evening dress," she observed.

I thought of the mighty industry catering to the feminine demand for new clothes, and finding it always insatiable. These two Junior League representatives were attired at the time in simple blouses and plain skirts, but they have been seen on occasion in far more elaborate toilettes.

Also, they have at other times been observed in groups that are to be classified as the gayest of the gay.

They were not denying many of the charges made by Elinor Glyn, as will be seen. Their moral standards are broad enough to support a few superficialities. Certainly the record of the Junior League refutes exclusively the more serious charge that girls of this type never have a thoughtful, a serious, an earnest moment.

Mrs. Boogher is well known for her literary tastes and achievements. Many of her poems have appeared, leading literary publications, some of her plays have been produced by the St. Louis Art League. Her chief objection to Elinor Glyn and her ideas, she remarked, is that she expresses them in such atrocious English."

THE CRAFT OF BUSTER BEAR

When there is something you can't do
Let those who can do it for you.
—Buster Bear.

A WISE head has Buster Bear on his big shoulders. He knows full well what he can do and what he cannot do and it is seldom that he wastes time trying to do a thing that it is at all doubtful that he can do.

When Buster discovered those sleeping Geese in the pond of Paddy the Beaver he understood at once what had brought Yowler the Bob Cat over there that night. He knew all about Yowler and his ways. He knew that Yowler had far more patience than he had. He knew that Yowler would watch hours at a time to catch a good dinner.

The scent of those Geese made Buster's mouth water just as it had the mouths of Yowler and Old Man Coyote and Reddy and Mrs. Fox and old Granny Fox. He wanted one of them. He wanted one of them very much indeed. But he knew that his chances of catching one were not nearly as good as the chances of Yowler the Bob Cat. Buster can move quickly when he wants to, but Yowler can move much more quickly.

Buster's small eyes twinkled shrewdly as he stood up to look over the pond, and in the moonlight saw those big birds sleeping. "They are safe enough where they are now," thought he. "There will be no chance to catch one unless they drift in close to shore. Even then it will take someone who can spring swiftly. Yowler can do just that. He is the one to catch one of those Geese. I'll leave it for him to do. I'll pretend to go off and then he'll come down from that tree and watch those Geese. If he catches one I'll have a good dinner. Yes, sir, I'll have a good dinner with no trouble at all; I'll simply take that Goose away from Yowler."

Buster chuckled to himself, sniffed once or twice, then dropped down to all fours and shuffled away through the woods. He didn't take any pains not to make a noise. Honker the Goose heard him, for Honker is a light sleeper. He awoke and listened for a few minutes. He knew by the sound that whoever had been there was going away. He looked his flock over and saw that all were there. Then he went to sleep again, satisfied that no harm could reach any of them out there in the water.

Yowler the Bob Cat heard Buster leave. He listened sharply as the sound of Buster's shuffling feet grew fainter and fainter and finally ceased. Then Yowler came down from the tree he had climbed at Buster's approach. He snarled under his breath as he glanced in the direction in which Buster had disappeared. Then he turned his attention to those Geese and in a few minutes had forgotten Buster Bear and everything else. You see, it seemed to him that the nearest Goose was drifting in a little. Yowler crouched flat and prepared for a long, patient wait.

Meanwhile Buster Bear had gone off about other business. "It will be a long time before any of those Geese come in near enough to be caught," he muttered. "Yes, sir, it will be a long time. I'll have plenty of time to get a lunch of acorns."

So Buster hunted up some acorns and had a very good lunch. After this he silently stole back toward the pond of Paddy the Beaver. You know, he can move very quietly indeed when he wants to. Some little distance back from the pond Buster stopped. He didn't want Yowler to suspect he was about. He knew that if Yowler should catch one of those Geese he could not carry such a great, heavy bird far or fast and there would be no trouble in catching up with Yowler and taking that Goose from him.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

Living in a Tower.

THE widely read man lives in a tower.

From the tower he looks down on life. He sees the past and the present—the activities of men from the earliest times to the present day.

He observes the scientist and the inventor busy with plans for the good of the human race.

He sees Governments rise or crumble into ruin.

He can, if he will, take part in the activities that he beholds. And he can take a far more capable part in them because he knows, as well as any man can know, what is going forward in the whole world.

To be widely read is to be educated. To be educated is to take advantage of the thought of other men, in all times and in all countries.

The colleges can direct reading. They can awaken the desire to be educated.

But if you are to be educated, you must do the educating yourself. Not all the college professors in the world can cram knowledge into your brain if your brain is not willing to do the work of digesting and storing it.

In America and England are many libraries—none of them employed to more than 10 or 15 per cent of their capacity.

They are storehouses of treasure which men pass by unheeding, intent on affairs which are of infinitely less importance than the acquisition of knowledge.

At secondhand bookstalls you can obtain the work of the ablest writers and thinkers in the world—paying for a single volume about what you would pay for a cigar.

The cigar may give you pleasure for 20 minutes. The book will give you pleasure and profit for a lifetime.

Read if you would be well informed. Read if you would be capable.

Many widely read men are not financially successful. Many financially successful men are not widely read.

But the man who is widely read has a better chance of success, for he knows more. He has lived in a tower, and from it seen the world. And if he adds wide reading to prosperity he can get all out of life that it contains, which is a great deal more than the pleasure of piling up dollars.

Comment on Elinor Glyn's Charges

The Love Cowards

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

(Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Co.

Nancy Hathaway and Bruce Henderson are love cowards. Nancy distrusts all men and Bruce hates all women, and then they are brought together in a lonely house, on the Massachusetts coast, where Nancy has gone as governess to Trix, Bruce's little niece. Trix is the child of the woman who deceived Bruce, and Bruce hates her. Trix is afraid of him and Nancy, determined to protect the child, incurs Bruce's enmity. One night he seizes her in his arms, thinking in that way to send her flying, and Nancy finds, to her horror, that she cannot hate him as she should after that moment. When Dr. Hunt tells her of his love Bruce interrupts the scene, and Nancy, against her better judgment and to save her pride, accepts the doctor's offer.

CHAPTER XLVII.
Nancy Is Shocked.

THERE was one thing that Nancy could not understand and that was Bruce's attitude last night. It was easy enough to understand why Bruce had seized her in his arms that first time because he had flung at her the moment after he had released her the words "Now, will you go?"

But last night there had been no motive for his touching her, no reason for it that she could see unless he suspected the truth of her feelings, and tortured her as he had tortured Trix. At the very thought her cheeks burned and her eyes closed involuntarily. He was entirely capable of doing a thing like that, for as Nancy believed, emotion was dead in him. All his better feelings had been crushed because of the falsity of one woman, and if he suspected for a moment that his touch had the power to arouse feeling of any kind in Nancy he would take the greatest delight in playing with her as a cat plays with a mouse.

These thoughts kept ringing through her mind as she tried to hush Trix's wild sobbing, and finally she turned to Miss Henderson in despair.

"What shall I do?"

Miss Henderson was looking at Nancy with a strange expression in her eyes. "You will have to go with us," she said finally, and very deliberately.

"But your brother"——

"I've gone so far, I might as well go all the way and take matters into my own hands."

After Trix's sobs had lessened and she had fallen into an exhausted sleep from very weakness, Miss Henderson beckoned Nancy into the hall. "I want to talk to you for a few moments. Will you come to my room?"

In surprise Nancy followed her downstairs. There was a definiteness about Miss Henderson's manner that vaguely troubled her; there was evidently something important that she wanted to say, something that bore on the situation very definitely.

Safe in Miss Henderson's room with the door closed, the older woman turned to Nancy deliberately.

"No doubt you'll think me mad, but I have a suspicion that I'm right in what I have to say. Did you ever stop to think that Bruce's persecution of you, his apparent hatred of you, might have another meaning?"

"I don't understand."

"I'll make myself plainer. I believe Bruce cares for you!"

Nancy started back. "Oh, Miss Henderson, you don't know what you're saying; why, such an idea is preposterous; is isn't to be considered."

"Nevertheless, I think I'm right, and, Nancy, if such a thing should be true, it might be the means of bringing Bruce back to his old self. I have suspected this for a long time. I don't know what gave me the idea, but I have hoped and prayed that it might be so. I'm an old woman, but sometimes old eyes are keener than young ones. I have seen Bruce look at you in the strangest manner, even when he was throwing some mocking sarcastic phrase at you. It was almost as though he resented the truth of his feelings and went on deliberately hurting you and making you suffer. I'm almost certain that I'm right."

Nancy's thoughts were suddenly in a whirl. Miss Henderson's amazing remarks together with the problem that had been in her own mind seemed somehow strangely significant. The scene last night swept over her again, the possessiveness of him as he had held her close, the vindictiveness with which he had forced her into open warfare as far as her relations with Dr. Hunt were concerned. Of course, it couldn't be true, it was all impossible; but if it were true, what a glorious revenge!

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Weekly Health Talk

By DR. MAX C. STARKLOFF
Health Commissioner of St. Louis.

RECENTLY there appeared a statement in the daily papers that certain persons were planning to fight against the rules that require children attending the public schools to be vaccinated, and statements were made attempting to show that vaccination did not prevent smallpox.

Anyone who makes the assertion that vaccination against smallpox does not prevent that disease is blind to the evidence of years of experience and so perverse in his effort to prove his point that he refuses to see the proof that has been produced in great abundance showing that smallpox rarely attacks people who are successfully vaccinated and never occurs in those who are revaccinated.

The courts have held in more than one instance that when the personal liberty of an individual conflicts with the welfare of the community in which he lives, the personal liberty of the individual must be checked. The community is far more important than the individual, and no person has a right, even in this liberty loving country, to do things that will endanger the life and health of his neighbors.

Smallpox is likely to visit us again this winter and, therefore, it is important that children be vaccinated. It is important that everybody who has not been vaccinated successfully, or has not had smallpox, should be vaccinated against the disease. If it were not for the fact that most people are now vaccinated we would have hundreds and thousands of cases and very many deaths, just as they did have in the days before Jenner discovered vaccination as a means of preventing smallpox. In those days smallpox was more common than measles and much more fatal, and, in fact, was for many centuries one of the most frightful scourges of the human race. In the eighteenth century every tenth death was due to smallpox and more than 500,000 people are known to have died each year. The disease occurs among all races, in all climates, at any age, and irrespective of whether the sanitary surroundings are good or bad.

It is a very foolish person who sets up his opinion of the value of vaccination against smallpox in opposition to the positive proof that years of experience show, and the positive results of scientific investigation, all of which give us today our freedom from this disease. If such a person should take the disease and not endanger others, no great harm would be done, but the disease does not confine itself to a single individual and that person would infect many others, whether he knew that he was doing it or not.

Every parent who has the best welfare of his children at heart will see that the child is vaccinated early in its life. It should be done during the second six months of life when the child is in good health, and between the months of October and June. While complications following vaccination do sometimes occur, it has been found that they occur more frequently in children who run about and principally in the summer months. Of course cleanliness of the vaccinated site is an absolutely essential part of the operation. The physician who does the vaccination should see that this lesson is impressed very firmly upon the family and the child. The preparation of the vaccination virus nowadays is surrounded with so many safeguards as to make it practically impossible to contaminate the virus with any material that would cause serious results, and the proper care and attention of the wound for just a couple of weeks insures a safe and painless recovery from vaccination and immunity from the disease for a number of years.

THE HEART OF A GIRL

By CAROLINE CRAWFORD

CHAPTER III.

WHETHER a girl could be in love with two men at the same time or not was the least of Peggy Dayton's concern when she awoke the next morning. Love was as abstract and distant to her as last night's moon.

Neither Townley's roses nor Billy's violets stirred her heart to one extra beat. She was thinking of just one thing—this was the day she was to seek a position.

At the breakfast table there was a note from her father. It was not unusual for Peggy to receive notes from the head of the family. Whenever she had flunked a subject at school or in some way displeased her parents her father wrote her a note and told her just what he thought about it with a little suggestion as to what she better do. Peggy knew at once that this was about Townley.

"I'll read it after breakfast," said Peggy, with a certain amount of dignity, to the author of the letter. "I'm going out to hunt a position and I think I ought to have my coffee before I get my mind upon some other subject."

"Better see Richardson first," pointed out Mr. Dayton, referring to a friend of his who had promised Peggy a start in a downtown bank. "Those school recommendations may be all right, but, after all, there's nothing like a little pull. There's a pretty good opening for a stenographer in a bank, Peg. Before you get through they may have women bank presidents, who knows?"

Mrs. Dayton laughed heartily and Peggy dug her knife quite forcefully into the bacon. Presently she left the table, wrote a little note to Townley thanking him for his roses and placing the still unopened missive from her father in her hand bag, hustled off for a busy day.

She decided to call at Richardson's office first. He was a big man with bushy eyebrows, a far too cordial handshake and a certain familiarity which made her wince. He took away all the dignity of business and hunting one's first position.

"Come right in, Miss Dayton," he said, "and take the best chair in the office. Your father told me all about you the other day. We used to be school chums, go down to the ole swimmin' hole together and all that sort of stuff. I'd have given Dayton's daughter a job if she had cross eyes and bowlegs, but, by Jove, when I see you—say, things look different.

"Now, I'll start you off at 25 bucks a week. That's some salary for a girl just out of school, too. Want to go to work today? Here, I'll give you a letter right now."

"Why, I hadn't planned to start today," gasped Peggy. "Really, Mr. Richardson, I have two other positions to consider—recommendations from my school. I haven't the slightest doubt that I'll be delighted to take the position you offer, and I thank you so much. But I think I ought to see both the other people."

"Stuff and nonsense. But trot along. You won't lose this place and I dare say you won't find a better offer."

Peggy breathed freely as she stepped out into the open air. She detested that man and yet $25 was a very fair offer for a beginner, better than many of her friends were getting after a year's experience.

Hurrying to the last place, "a situation for a private secretary," her heart fell. Her would-be employer was a flirtatious, measley, receding-chinned individual, who offered her "$15 per and advancement."

There was nothing left to do but to accept Richardson's offer. She sought out a quiet little tea room, ordered some muffins and marmalade and prepared to open her father's note, the note she knew concerned Townley and no more Billy.

She believed she cared for Townley.

She knew she liked Billy.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

MY FAVORITE STORIES
By IRVIN S. COBB

ADVICE TO CHARLIE CHAPLIN.

LAST spring when Gen. Neville, the hero of the defense of Verdun, was making his tour of America he was the guest of honor at a big public reception in one of the Los Angeles hotels. Among those invited to meet the distinguished visitor were the more prominent members of the moving-picture colony.

At the doors of Gen. Neville's suite Will Rogers met Charlie Chaplin. Chaplin, who in private life is a reserved and rather shy little man, was considerably fussed up over the prospect ahead of him.

"I suppose we're expected to say a few words to the General," he confided to Rogers. "But for the life of me I can't think of the best way to start the conversation."

"Well," he said, "you might ask him if he was in the war, and which side he was on."

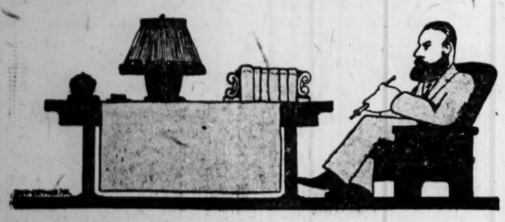
MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY
By James J. Montague.



DISTRESSING NEWS.

Whiskers are to be revived among college undergraduates.

We do not hold with S. G. Blythe,
Who somewhat frequently affirms
That whiskers make him cringe and writhe
As does the sight of angleworms.
A set of whiskers now and then
(To give it what is but its dues)
Adorns the maps of many men,
For instance, look at Charles E. Hughes.

When Mr. Sousa sheared his set,
The world at once observed their lack;
Ourselves were moved to deep regret,
Should Jim Ham Lewis shave off his,
Their loss would shake the halls of state;
But here we pause—this subject is Too sad for us to contemplate.

But whiskers chain mankind's regard
When they grow thick upon the throat
Of persons bearded like a pard
(The pard, we think, must be a goat);
They must possess a reverend air
To hold the populace in awe,
Such whiskers as great rulers wear,
Or men renowned in war or law.

A beard upon an undergrad
Our reason swiftly would destroy
And drive us raving, staring mad.
And if this eye-disturbing style
On campuses revived should be,
We know we soon shall be on trial
For murder in the first degree.
